AAA Program for Wheat Announced For Next Season

Three important developments regarding Oregon production of wheat in the coming year have been announced recently at the state Agricultural Conservation program office in Corvallis.

First of these was the decision by the secretary of agriculture, based on present and prospective supplies of wheat this year, that there will not be any market quotas proclaimed for wheat. Latest estimates indicate a total supply about 47 million bushels below the figure where the law requires that a marketing quota be proclaimed and referred to the farmers for a vote.

The second announcement had to do with the fixing of an allotment of 62 million acres for wheat in the United States for the 1940 crop. This compares with 55 million acres for 1939, or an increase of approximately 13 per cent. The new quota of 62 million acres is about the normal planting needed for domestic use and moderate exports. This indicates that the wheat surplus problem is more nearly in hand than it has been for some time, according to N. C. Donaldson, state executive officer.

The new level means that Oregon's wheat allotment, which is 768,303 acres this year, will be increased at least 10 per cent next year and possibly more. With the national allotment figure set, work on county and individual allotments will be undertaken at once, making it possible to announce these by July 1.

The third announcement concerns farmers who have grown no wheat during the past three seasons but who would like to grow some in 1940 and desire a wheat allotment. The present farm act provides that up to 3 per cent of the total county wheat allotment may be allocated to such new wheat farms. This makes it possible to develop new farms or to change farming practices in accordance with best farm management principles.

Applications for such new wheat allotments are made in writing to the county committee and must be done not later than 15 days after announcements of allotments for old wheat farms are made.

BRESSLER'SOSC 4H Session Promises Record Again This Year

Another record-breaking 4-H summer session is in prospect at Oregon State college June 5 to 16, when a total of about 2000 club boys and girls and local leaders will be on the campus for an intensive two-weeks program of studies and activities.

H. C. Seymour, state club leader, says that despite the increased enrollment and the fact that some 1500 state grange convention delegates will be in Corvallis during the second week of the 4-H session, adequate facilities will be available to handle the group.

Oregon conducts what is generally recognized as the largest two-weeks 4-H club summer session in the United States.

Ten original radio plays written by Oregon 4-H club members will be broadcast over KOAC during the summer session, with delegations serving as radio actors and actresses, announces James Morris, KOAC announcer, who is in charge of this fifth annual contest sponsored by the state station.

Eunice Timm of Dayton won first place in the general radio playwriting contest, while Alice Adams of Portland won first in the traffic safety contest sponsored by the secretary of state's office. Both were awarded summer session scholarship prizes. Second place in the safety contest was won by Jacqueline Morton of Cottage Grove.
