

Logged Off Land Showing Promise as Cattle Grazing Area

Cattle, sheep and goats are all faring well on the logged-off lands seeded to grass in the Northrup creek experimental grazing area, east Clatsop county. Such was the report made to approximately 250 farmers and representatives of public agencies who attended the third annual Field day at Northrup creek late in June.

Herb Howell, superintendent of the Astoria branch experiment station, who is also in charge of the grazing experiment, told about the response of the various grasses which have been seeded on the burned-over areas, but said final conclusions have not yet been reached as to which grasses will prove the most profitable.

A distinguished visitor taking part in the Field day was Governor Charles A. Sprague, who was introduced to the group by William A. Schoenfeld, dean of agriculture at OSC, who was chairman for the occasion. Governor Sprague urged the farmers to await more conclusive information from the test areas before risking too much money of their own in reseeding cut-over land. He pointed out that the biggest experiment will come when people take these findings and put them to practical use.

Every indication so far points to the practicability of using large areas of cut-over lands in western Oregon for livestock production, the visitors learned. The object is to develop an income-producing industry while reforestation is proceeding.

out that western Oregon grass lands might well be used to supplement the eastern Oregon ranges in producing livestock. Possible development of a larger livestock fattening enterprise in the Willamette valley will also increase the demand for feeder animals which could be produced on the cut-over lands.

A combined meeting of the Clatsop and Columbia county livestock associations was also held, with E. H. McDonald, president of the Columbia county group, and F. H. Wooden, vice-president of the Clatsop county group, presiding. A resolution was passed urging that farmers pay more attention to the state law demanding that all livestock marketed bear sheriff's tags.

Softball League

The second half schedule of the city softball league will get under way Monday evening when the Bohemian club and Quality Market teams clash. This game opens the 6-weeks schedule of play with games being played every night from Monday through Friday. First half games were played from Monday to Thursday night. The second half will be one week shorter and all postponed games will be played at the end of the regular schedule. The play-off will be decided at a later date.

Darling Variety team won the first half championship by sweeping all their games without a loss. This team will be the team to beat in the second half although several other teams will be fighting for the first place and also for the play-off positions. Virgil Kingsley, Oakridge high school coach has been signed up by the Darling team and several of the other teams have bolstered their lineups in preparation for the second half race. The Post Office and the Eagles have added several players to their rosters and will be a stumbling stone for the other members of the league this half.

Quality Market boasts the standout pitcher in Tilton and if he remains in the box they should cause plenty of trouble in the second half. Culp Creek, Bohemian club, Dorena and the Union will all be fighting for the three play-off positions.

All games this half are to start at 6:30 and all players are requested to be there on time.

Quality Market gave the Darling Variety team their toughest game of the season Wednesday evening by holding the "champs" to a 3 to 2 score. Darling scored two runs in the first inning and one run in the second. Beginning the third inning Tilton relieved Milligan in the box for Quality Market and held the Darling men to three scattered hits in the last four innings. Quality scored their first run off Swanson in the fifth and in the sixth tallied again for their total of two runs.

The schedule for next week is as follows:

Monday, July 10 — Bohemian club vs Quality Market.

Tuesday, July 11 — Dorena vs. Union.

Wednesday, July 12 — Darling Variety vs. Eagles.

Thursday, July 13 — Culp Creek vs. Post Office.

Friday, July 14 — Dorena vs. Bohemian Club.
