Oct. 30 Final Date for Insurance Fall Wheat

The final date for acceptance of applications from Oregon wheat growers for crop insurance on their 1940 winter wheat crop is October 30, according to Will Steen of Milton, chairman of the state AAA committee.

Mark Weatherford, Gilliam county wheat grower, was the first man to take insurance on his winter wheat crop for next year. Most of the applicants last year and this have taken 75 per cent coverage.

Out of 708 policies in effect in Oregon this past season, indemnity payments totaling 44,000 bushels on 52 policies have been made to date, and others are pending. Principal causes of losses were late frosts, dry weather, and the July hail storm in Morrow county.

"Winter wheat growers who want to insure their crops have two factors to keep in mind," he said. "First, they must apply for the insurance and pay the premium before their crop is planted this fall. Second, applications cannot be accepted even if the crop hasn't been planted, after the general cut-off date of October 30."

The state chairman reminded wheat growers that all farmers who intend to plant wheat for harvest in 1940 are eligible for "all-risk" crop insurance now being offered to growers by the Federal Crop Insurance corporation. Either the operator or the landlord, or both, may insure their interest in the crop.

Under the crop insurance program, growers may insure their interest in either 50 or 75 per cent of the average yield of their farms. Where more than one person has an interest in the crop, each may insure his own interest independently of action of the others. Separate contracts are made to each individual, without affecting the interest of other parties. Application is made to the county AAA committee.

There were three fatal accidents involving motorcycles in Oregon during the first half of 1939, figures compiled by the secretary of state's office revealed. All told, there were 140 accidents in which motorcycles figured.
