NOBODY WINS A WAR

War never permanently settled any difficulty, although it may have decided issues. Victories apparently won have not always brought glory to the conquerors. The present powder keg in Europe, a threat to the world peace or the past five years, is the result of a war started twenty-five years ago, in which the United States was finally drawn in to make the world safe for democracy. And the unfortunate thing about the present European crisis is that the world has not recovered from the last conflict. The repercussion brought about by the 1914 war created a world-wide depression which caused existing governments to crumble and dictatorships set up to plague future peace. Individual liberties have been lost in the meantime by many nations and millions have been left to obey the whims of the dictators.

It appears as though enlightened nations have gone back hundreds of years in the matter of government, all because of war. The only good, if we are able to see any good that may come from another war, is that the dictator who is the aggressor will lose his neck.

INVESTIGATING GOVERNMENT-IN-BUSINESS

The country is used to investigations of private business by political committees, many of which have proven to be "inquisitions" in which business has been persecuted and not permitted to give adequate testimony in its own defense.

Before Congress meets again there is to be another kind of investigation which has long been needed. Acting under a resolution sponsored by Senator Byrd, the Treasury will investigate all government bureaus engaged in business, and measure them by the accounting standards generally applied to private enterprise.

The resolution requires the Treasury officials to compile for each agency an annual balance sheet and profit and loss statement, together with a description of the accounting principles used; to appraise the assets of each agency as of June 30, 1939; and, in the case of lending agencies, to compile a detailed statement of the aggregate amount of loans made, repayments, defaults, write-offs etc.

It's possible that some of the politicians who have most enjoyed reviling business during investigations are due for some squirming themselves.

Business continues to look up in many lines. Nothing comparable to a boom is in evidence, but the slow and steady improvement that set in some time back is continuing.

General forecast is that there will be a substantial fall upturn.

CLIMBING FOOL'S HILL

To the Editor: What is fool hill? boys and girls ask, when it is mentioned.

One without reason, heedless, reckless, unreasonable, thinks he or she knows better than his parents or anxious friends, what life is all about. Thinks his life is all his own and he knows how to live it and thanks to no one. Parents are back numbers and old fogies and should stay "shut up." At work or play, on farm, in school, in shop, or office he thinks and sometimes says I wish I was free from this—it's a slave's life—I'd show you what life really is. Evil and rebellious thoughts nursed, harbored till actions are unkind toward home and loved ones and all friends.

The story of the prodigal son related in Luke 15:11-32 is a fine example of a fool climbing life's hill—found himself in rags sitting in a hog pen eating hog feed. He came to himself—his reason—remembered home, father and mother. Oh! how sweet the memory—sweetest words on earth—to the boy and girl over fool's hill—sane. Now he reasons and finds father and mother's council supreme, kind and just—the best friends a boy and girl ever had. He says so and is now climbing "wisdom's hill." Starts life anew, aright.

ONE WHO TRIED IT.

The farmer and his wife walked the short distance of 3 miles from their home to the county fair. She was laden down with the lunch basket. After arriving at the fair, he turned to her and said:

"Miranda, you'd better let me carry the basket now, we might get separated in the crowd."

Wheat Outlook In U. S. Better Than In World Situation

With domestic wheat prices being held well above record-low world market levels by United States government measures and other factors, the outlook for wheat is better than world supply and price conditions would ordinarily suggest, states the annual wheat market outlook report of the O.S.C. extension service just released. The report shows that wheat prices in Oregon and in the country as a whole are about the same as a year ago, although the Liverpool price has gone down sharply as world wheat supplies have mounted to record quantities.

On the basis of present supply, domestic use, and export prospects, a slight reduction in the carry-over of domestic wheat next July seems probable. On the other hand, the government wheat acreage goal for planting for harvest in 1940 is 13 per cent above a year ago. Thus the domestic supply of wheat for the 1940-41 market season will depend much, as usual, upon growing conditions, the report points out.

On July 15, the average farm price of wheat in Oregon was 59 cents a bushel, compared with 57 cents a year previous, and $1.02 at the same date in 1937. In the country as a whole, the farm price of wheat was 10 per cent lower than last year and slightly less than 50 per cent of the 1937 level.

With respect to world wheat supply and demand conditions, the report shows that stocks have accumulated until the supply in prospect during the 1939-40 marketing season is the greatest on record. Prices at Liverpool are the lowest for several hundred years, in step with the general rule that prices there fluctuate in line with the world wheat supply.

As is the situation in the United States, prices for wheat in the markets of other countries may be higher or lower than prices at Liverpool, owing to special conditions of supply, demand, and governmental measures. The report concludes that it is possible that the demand for wheat could be increased abroad by changes in the economic and political situation.
