ONE THING INDUSTRY MUST RECOGNIZE

Industry can't demand experience from prospective employes and after the employes are once hired, discharge the employes after they have passed the age of alleged productiveness. If industry does continue to be exacting relative to experience of its employes and as exacting relative to the time of service, it must bear an increasing share of taxes to care for those no longer employed and provide some sort of training period for those it intends to employ.

Young people of today know how difficult it is to obtain any sort of position; many know by bitter experience. The first question asked is "Have You Had Any Experience?" This is true of most any profession young people want to enter, including the teaching profession. The prospective applicant might well ask another question in turn and some do, "How Am I to Obtain This Experience Unless Someone Hires Me?"

The difficulty of breaking into a job might not be so bad were the young applicant assured of a long period of employment, provided of course such applicants could hold a position, but they are not. Many of the larger concerns figure that their employes pass the peak of their usefulness by the time they reach thirty-five to forty years of age. Thus if the average employe is not hired until his is twenty-one years of age and discharged after he is thirty-five his span of usefulness is narrowed down to some fourteen years and if he is to be independent he must get ahead very rapidly, or else he is ready for a pension or charity at this time.

It's no wonder then that we have seen ex-employes ban together and form employment clubs with a view of getting back to work, but so far the movement has not had an appreciable effect on industry, many executives still insist on picking their employes at about twenty-one years of age and discharging them at about thirty-five. Unless industry wakes up and realizes this problem, the social security taxes and other forms of taxes we are paying now, won't be a drop in the bucket to the taxes the future generations may have to pay.

GOOD SERVICE PAYS

"The modern small town business man has many problems, but if he keeps his feet on the ground and uses his head there is no reason why he should not hold his own with any and all competition," says the Chieftain, of Enterprise, Oregon. "He has the means at hand to give personalized service, sell good merchandise at fair prices and above all be a friend of his customers."

It is to the credit of the American business man that he has always adjusted himself to the changing times. But it is not surprising. The biggest businesses this country knows, and especially those in the food and merchandising field, have grown from little businesses. About the only capital most of their founders had at the beginning was intelligence, ideas, and a willingness to work. The public pays well those who serve it well. And service is the stepping stone of all progress.

Scottish Deer Hound Royal Dog
The Scottish deer hound was once known as the "royal dog of Scotland." One of the biggest of the coursing hounds, and one of the oldest of breeds, this shaggy dog used to decorate the halls and firesides of Highland chieftains.

Plan $3,000,000 Stadium
Rome is backing its application for the 1944 Olympics by building this year a $3,000,000 stadium to seat 20,000. A disappearing track will be one of the features. It can be removed from sight when not in use.

Blossom To Bean To Pie: Here's A Coffee Saga!

A fragrant blossom for a few days; a bean for a few months; a pie for a few minutes—here's a coffee story with a happy ending!

THE time is nigh for this coffee pie, so borrow the flavor from the pot and let the refrigerator do the work. You don't need the oven, but you do need the recipe which is given here. Be sure to serve it with a big, brimming cup of coffee!

Coffee Sponge Pie
3 tbsps. butter melted
14 graham crackers
1 tsp. gelatin
1/4 cup cold water
3 eggs
1 1/2 tbsps. confectioner's sugar
1 cup sugar
1 cup double strength coffee
1/4 tsp. salt
1 tsp. lemon juice
1 tsp. vanilla
1/2 cup heavy cream

Roll graham crackers and combine with melted butter; press mixture firmly against sides and bottom of 9-inch pie pan. Cool. Sprinkle gelatin on top cold water in a bowl and dissolve over hot water. Beat egg yolks; add 1/2 the sugar, coffee and salt. Cook in double boiler until thickened. Add dissolved gelatin and chill until just beginning to thicken; add lemon juice and vanilla. Fold in egg whites stiffly beaten with remaining 1/2 cup sugar. Pour into lined pie pan and place in refrigerator for several hours. To serve top with whipped cream, sweetened with confectioner's sugar. Serves 6 to 8.
