WORST DISEASE OF CALVES CURED BY SPECIAL MILK

The use of acidophilus milk as a treatment for scours in calves has become general since it was originated by the Oregon experiment station in 1935, and it has given better results than any other known treatment, according to Dr. J. N. Shaw and O. H. Muth of the department of veterinary medicine. These men discuss the use of acidophilus milk in a new circular of information No. 216, just issued by the experiment station.

HEBRON SCHOOL CLOSING PROBABLY LAST TIME

(Hebron Correspondent)

The annual closing day picnic for the Hebron school was held at the school house Friday. The program was followed by a pot-luck dinner and ice cream was furnished by Mrs. Clara Morrow, the teacher. This will probably be the last closing day ever to be observed by the Hebron school, since the building is in the basin of the proposed Cottage Grove flood control dam.
