LEGION AUXILIARY.

The American Legion Auxiliary met for a business meeting on Monday evening at the armory. A report on Christmas cheer for the Roseburg Veterans' hospital was given by chairman, Eunice Vandenburg. She also reported that gifts had been given each of the Gold Star mothers.

Hester Reed reported on the community Christmas baskets which were filled and presented by the local welfare organizations, and that a gift had been sent to the department president, Laura Goode.

It was voted to purchase 1000 poppies for Memorial Day poppy sale. Orders are requested early so that the disabled veterans may start working on them, since they are all hand made by hospitalized patients.

February is the National Defense month for the Legion and a Naval Print Plate was ordered. These plates are an annual purchase in each unit of the Auxiliary throughout the nation, with proceeds of sales used for national defense. The plates are exquisitely fashioned of finest china, and bearing historic prints of early naval engagements. The local unit has used their plates as awards and gifts or disposed of them in other ways among the Legion and Auxiliary members as a means of raising funds.

The first meeting in February will be given over to a National Defense program with the Legion. Subjects for talks were appointed to members by the president at the meeting.

The refreshment calendar committees were posted by chairman, Marie Wicks. The committee for January 21st is: Jessie Matthews, Mable Doleman and Ruth Randall.

Announcement was made of the 12 proposed measures approved by the department Legion executive committee for submission to the coming legislative session. Members were urged to make a study of the Constitution of the United States, in observance of legislative month, as a quiz program will be held at a later date.

The next meeting of the unit will be held January 20th, with a social hour for the Legion following the business meeting.
