

Oregon Women to Be Mobilized After Ninety Days

State-wide plans to use the extensive organizations which conducted the house-to-house women's occupational census, first of its kind ever made in the United States, as a farm labor recruitment body cooperating with area offices of the United States employment service, were announced Tuesday by Mrs. A. F. Holmer, Lane county chairman of the Oregon Board of Mobilization of Women.

"By cooperating with the employment service in its crucial labor supply efforts, Oregon women can fulfill promises to work as needed in the state's offices, factories and fields," Mrs. Holmer said. "We made American history by successfully mobilizing about 80 per cent of our women, and now we are in a position to show the rest of the country how such state-wide registration can be used."

Mrs. Holmer quoted statements made by Governor Charles A. Sprague; Mrs. Sadie Orr Dunbar, retiring director of the Oregon Board for Mobilization of Women; and L. C. Stoll, Oregon director of the United States employment service. The consensus is that, unless the state's women are able to fulfill the promises made during the registration drive, several months of organizational effort will be wasted.

Commenting on the new plan, Governor Sprague said that "Mrs. Dunbar and Director Stoll have assured me that members of the state sponsoring committee, county chairmen, the more than 5000 women who took the registration, and the thousands of women who indicated a willingness to help in the emergency are ready to cooperate with the employment service in harvesting victory crops."

Director Stoll explained that mobilization chairmen will be called upon to serve again as county leaders in the recruitment of women workers, including applicants for training courses in war industries, employes for offices and factories, and women in the berry and bean fields.

"Mobilization chairmen will be invited to attend county meetings with the agricultural labor committee, which consists of the following persons: Truman A. Chase, O. S. Fletcher, Fred Knox, Carl Robertson, Glenn Stromme, George W. Platt, A. R. Cockerline and C. V. MacDonald.

The first "acid" test of the new plan is expected to come in the next week or two when more than 50,000 men, women and children, mostly in family groups will go into Western Oregon fields to harvest what is expected to be one of the largest berry crops in recent years.

Women and students registered in recent months will be called upon by 22 full-time employment offices and many other temporary farm offices only after the community labor supply and available migratory workers have been exhausted, according to farm placement officers of the employment service. Younger children are expected to work only in family groups or under adequate supervision.
