Trench Is Dinner Table for American Flyers

Originally intended for air raid protection purposes, this trench also serves as a dinner table for American flyers in the Middle East.

Our readers are perhaps familiar with many phases of the thirteen billion dollar war loan to be launched April 12th. To assure victory two things can happen, we can put the voluntary plan over where the individual is permitted to buy his share of war bonds on a voluntary basis saying how much he wants to buy or failing in this the government can step in and make an assessment and tell you how much to buy and when. It depends on whether we think enough of our present liberties to buy enough bonds to fight the present war and win.

The cost of the present war is the price we are paying for our present-day liberties and the price must be paid if victory is assured. It's an expensive war to be sure; the most expensive in all history, but since we are in it, it's an inopportune time to gripe about the expenses. As a matter of fact the United States today is paying a greater price according to current statistics than all other warring nations combined, but this is largely due to our standard of living.

This isn't saying that we should prepare now to make the most practical peace terms. If war cost rises as it has the past two hundred years, we will never be able to finance another war.

POST-WAR PRODUCTION

The post-war organization of the world, from great international schemes down to individual company plans for keeping men employed, became a topic of increasing discussion this week and out of the welter of talk, some definite probabilities emerged. Many companies have detailed blueprints for their peacetime production and distribution, others have tentative products on the drawing boards; still others have worked out schemes under which customers may put in orders now for post-war needs in order to get priorities on the rush for goods which will develop with the peace. In Washington, there was the cradle-to-the-grave social security talk, the discussions between Sir Anthony Eden and our officials, and some Congressional plans for world organization. In London, Winston Churchill gave his outline for the future. But business men know that, whatever the political developments may be, there must be employment, production and sales to make the economic system click, and they are bucking down to that job. And the indications now are that, while we'll have a lot of new products, the major production and distribution effort will be directed by supplying the pent-up demand for all of the standard products we're doing without now while producers make war goods.

THEY MUST EAT

Former president Herbert Hoover, outstanding leaders in agriculture and milk production, and the governors of many states have been pointing out the dangers involved in undermining our farm output by policies which treat agriculture as a non-essential industry, in comparison with so-called war industries.

It is self evident that any policy which cripples food production, will wreck the whole war program. Men and women have to eat every day before they can produce or fight. We can't keep our promises to our Allies to furnish them food, and at the same time feed this nation, unless the farmer has the manpower and the equipment to raise the crops.

A lost crop season or a lost milk cow involves a time element for replacement, of from one to three years. It is well that these facts are now being impressed on those responsible for future farm policies.

FOR THIRTY PIECES OF SILVER?

A letter from members of the 750th Tank Battalion, Company A, at Fort Knox, Kentucky, to workers who recently struck in a war industry, said in part:

"We feel deeply hurt to think you would let the boys overseas down. Just what do you think would happen to this country if the boys overseas would sit down, and quit fighting, because they just make $50 a month? We need more fighting equipment. What do you Americans want? More money now and slavery later, or less money and freedom? Just think how some of your sons and brothers over there would feel if they knew how you were selling them out, and that's what you are doing when you stop production."

There is a Bible story of a sell-out for 30 pieces of silver. Read it.

COURT OF HONOR HELD

Eighteen Boy Scouts met Monday night at the Jefferson auditorium for their Court of Honor with Scoutmaster Ernie White, and assistant scoutmasters, Lance Naish and Joe Crick, and several of the parents of the scouts present. Bob Crick, Bob Hagen, Ashley Flaten and John Dunlevy passed their tenderfoot tests and were presented with tenderfoot pins by Joe Crick.

The Rev. White presented a gift to Bob Crick for making the most advancement and for the most regular attendance for a certain length of time. A merit badge was presented Bob Naish. Three receiving service stars for one or more years service were Ross Adkins, Russell Porterfield, Ben Hickey, Robert Naish and Wayne McCall with Mr. Naish making the presentation.

Preceding the Court of Honor each patrol put on a skit. Following the service, the boys played games in the gymnasium. Sunday twelve of the scouts with Mr. Naish went out to the Joe Crick home and from there went on a hike and investigated a suitable place for a summer camp. Tuesday morning, Army Day, four of the Scouts put out the American flags in their respective places on the street with the American Legion supervising.

CLUB SENDS MAGAZINES TO CAMP ADAIR

A short business meeting was held yesterday by the London 4-H mothers club at the old London hotel building at which time it was reported that the London 4-H club had sent in a subscription to the Reader's Digest to be sent to the hospital service at Camp Adair. This is in addition to the subscriptions to Life and Liberty magazines sent last month. Mrs. Arlie Sugg, president, urged that members continue to turn in knit silk for the government. Jeanne Morton was appointed to write a letter of thanks to Mrs. Norval Williams, a former member of the club, now residing near Portland for obtaining permission from the owner of the hotel building that club meetings be held there.

A discussion of the method to work the point system for food rationing to the greatest advantage was one of the principal topics following the business meeting. Crafts work for the day was on linoleum block print. The next meeting will be held at the hotel on April 21.

INTERESTING BOOKS AT LIBRARY

More new and interesting books are arriving at the library almost every week. Among the books are several on aviation, both for adults and children, autobiographies, books on poetry and religious books, as well as several new books of fiction and books on the war and countries involved by the war.

For adults who are interested in aviation are the following books: "Mathematics on Aviation" which is one of the Air-age Education Series by Osteyee; "Heroines of the Sky" by Adams and Cromwell; "Aeronautical Occupations" by Leyson; "Sky Hostess" by Peckham; "New Alphabet of Aviation" by Shenton.

For children who are also interested in aviation, there are "Wings for You" by Cross; "Air Workers Today" by Kehler; and "Aviation Cadet" which tells of the life and training of an air cadet. For the Sunday school teacher, superintendent and all vitally interested in christian work are several new books such as "Toward Understanding God" by Martin; "Healing For All" by Ahrendt; "The Road to Victory" by Speiman; and "A New Approach to Christian Unity" by Charles Ewing Brown.

Three new biographies for those who enjoy reading the lives of others are "The Drs. Mayo" by Clapesattle; "The Lady of Goddeys" by Sarah Hale; and "The Log of 'Bob' Bartlett" by Bartlett. The poetry lovers will find "Poems I Remember" by Kieran, and "Forty-thousand Quotations" by Douglas.

These are just a few of the new books which are steadily arriving and being arranged on the new shelves which have recently been installed in the library. One set of shelves extending clear across one end of the library and ten other sets of shelves which were needed and which adds so much to the
