

Better Marketing Would Reduce Big Waste of Livestock

Oregon livestock producers and handlers could add thousands of pounds of meat to the wartime needs if they would improve practices in marketing cattle, calves, sheep and hogs, declares Dr. W. H. Lytle, state veterinarian with the state department of agriculture. In the United States, a probable 25 million pounds of livestock goes to waste yearly because of careless handling in loading for market, carelessness that causes bruises or injuries or death while in transit and carelessness about the condition of vehicles in which the animals are conveyed to market.

Much of this loss cannot be avoided, but much of it can be avoided if livestock producers, handlers and haulers will combine to overcome some of the factors which contribute to this waste.

For instance, use of partitions in both trucks and railroad cars will prevent animals from being crowded about and bruised when the vehicle is only partly loaded. Partitions should be used when more than one kind of animal goes into a single load, with exception of calves and sheep which may be loaded into the same compartment. Large hogs should be partitioned from pigs; and bulls, horns or unruly cattle should be separated from other cattle.

Partitions and racks should be free of projections which may bruise or injure the animals carried and spare tires and other objects should be left out of the space in which animals are confined.

Use of canvas slippers as driving aids will not cause flesh bruises as do clubs, canes and similar devices.

Other suggested aids to curtailing livestock waste in process of marketing: Provide cleared ramps or inclines for loading and unloading upper decks of vehicles.

Provide plenty of clearance for animals on main floor when upper deck is used.

See that floors are bedded with straw, fine gravel or sawdust to prevent slipping.

British, Italians Await Aid

Side by side at a regimental post in North Africa, wounded British Yorkshiresmen and Italian prisoners lie awaiting first aid. Bullets and shells made no distinction between sides. Soon the wounded men will be taken to hospitals at the rear to recuperate.

Fascinating Film Set to Technicolor

Hollywood magic reaches lofty new heights in Universal's "Arabian Nights," according to the flood of enthusiastic raves by critics who have witnessed initial showings of the new Technicolor innovation. The picture, presented by Walter Wanger Productions, comes to the Arcade Theatre May 16 through the 19th and stars Jon Hall, Maria Montez and Sabu.

Rarely has any cinema venture been anticipated with livelier interest, and reports indicate that the picture will come up to every expectation. It is significant to note that advance announcements stress the adult entertainment element of the film, which would indicate that the full fascination of the original Arabian Nights tale has not been sacrificed.

Adventures Revealed
The story, dealing with the romantic adventures of Sherazade, exotic dancer of Bagdad, moves swiftly against the vivid background of the Orient. Described as a gleaming panorama of desert warfare and slave conquest, the plot highlights the rivalry of two princely brothers over the affection of the dancer.

Maria Montez, glamorous Latin star, appears as Sherazade, while Jon Hall and Leif Erikson portray the brothers who fall under her spell. Sabu is said to have his most colorful role, and others in the imposing cast include Billy Gilbert, Edgar Barrier and Shemp Howard.

Producer Wagner is declared to have assembled a multitude of Hollywood's most beautiful girls for the lavish harem and slave market sequences, while others were recruited for spectacular dancing scenes in which Miss Montez is featured.

Important characterizations are contributed by Thomas Gomez, Turhan Bey, John Qualen, Charles Coleman and Richard Lane. Attractive feminine players include Elyse Knox, Acquagetta and Carmen D'Antonio.
