A SOLDIER SPEAKS

So you're sick of the way the country's run,
And you're sick of the way the rationing's done,
And you're sick of standing around in a line,
You're sick, you say—well, that's just fine,
So am I sick of the sun and the heat,
And I'm sick of the feel of my aching feet,
And I'm sick of the mud and the jungle flies,
And I'm sick of the stench when the night mists rise,
And I'm sick of the siren's wailing shriek,
And I'm sick of the groans of the wounded and weak,
And I'm sick of the sound of the bomber's dive,
And I'm sick of seeing the dead alive,
I'm sick of the roar and the noise and the din,
I'm sick of the taste of food from a tin,
And I'm sick of the slaughter—I'm sick to my soul,
I'm sick of playing a killer's role,
And I'm sick of blood and of death and the smell,
And I'm even sick of myself as well,
But I'm sicker still of a tyrant's rule,
And conquered lands where the wild beasts drool,
And I'm cured damn quick when I think of the day,
When all this hell will be out of the way,
When none of this mess will have been in vain,
And the lights of the world will blaze again,
And things will be as they were before,
And kids will laugh in the streets once more,
And the Axis' flags will be dipped and furled,
And God looks down on a peaceful world.

—Maude Harget in Washington Times-Herald.

NONSENSE MUST CEASE

One effective weapon against inflation is greater production of consumer goods. Taxes and bonds can never be made to absorb all of the war inflated earnings of the people. Moreover, it is becoming evident that price ceilings are a limited success. Therefore, to help maintain stability there must be sufficient production of necessities to furnish an outlet for consumers' dollars. If there is no such purchasing power outlet and wages continue to spiral upward, accompanied by astronomical government borrowing, the inevitable result will be more and more inflation.

Civilian production should not be curbed any more than is absolutely necessary to armament demands. The nonsense of artificial restrictions on production merely to make the people realize they are at war, must cease. Lengthening casualty lists carry their own tragic story.

In addition to stepping up production, the reams of red tape entangling retail distribution must be removed. Rationing and price regulations must be simplified. Attempts to stop inflation by bludgeoning retail prices back to lower levels, regardless of costs, should be abandoned before the distribution industry is demoralized. The average merchant, chain store in particular, operates on paper thin margins.

If the "get tough" theorists persist in hunting for excuses to curtail production and distribution, instead of hunting for means to achieve greater production and more efficient distribution, the country will have not only inflation but thousands of crippled industries. And instead of being able to sit in Washington issuing decrees from swivel chairs to cooperative, organized retailers, the price fixers will be forced to chase up and down the back alleys of the nation in a vain attempt to catch black market operators.

FIRE GUARDS

Civilian defense officials have repeatedly warned that as the prospect of military defeat becomes increasingly apparent to German and Japanese leaders the danger of air attacks on this country grow greater. Fire bombs will play a major part if such attacks occur.

As the Office of Civilian Defense points out: "War has aggravated the fire hazards in every American community. Ordinary day-to-day fires threaten our lives and war production. Beyond that, the new enemy high explosive fire bombs carry with them the threat of disastrous conflagrations unless trained volunteers are ready to stop small fires before they can endanger large areas. In present day bombings of cities and vital war centers, fire bombs comprise more than half the 'pay load.' A city may have to face more than a thousand fires set simultaneously—a task far beyond the capacity of regular fire-fighting forces."

The OCD is mobilizing a fire guard force of selected civilians not only to combat fire caused by enemy action, but to combat fire losses brought about by our own carelessness. The result of OCD efforts should be to make the nation increasingly aware of the fire menace. If it succeeds, it may well render a service of far greater value than the potential damage threatening the country from enemy bombers.

Protein Lack Lowered Stamina

It was observed that a large percentage of those suffering from "war dropsy" in Germany in 1919 also manifested an increased susceptibility to infectious diseases which caused the death rate to rise as food supplies became scarcer. An intensive study following the war showed that this war dropsy was due in large measure to the reduced protein content of the blood which resulted from a lack of protein in the diet.

Chinese Diet

Rice and wheat are the staple foods of China, with soy beans, kumliang, millet, barley, corn, and potatoes next in importance. The nation as a whole consumes little fish and meat, and small quantities of eggs, fruits, and greens, which are considered as subsidiary foods. While it is fairly sufficient in calory values (in normal years, not in war years), the diet is seriously deficient in protein, calcium, and vitamins.

It's Washday in Australia

Sergeants John Runnels, Henry Faurot and Walter Sandberg have put together an electric washing machine somewhere in Australia, and are proceeding to pound the grime out of those GI khakis.

Scours of Sheep And Goats Caused By Worm Parasite

The most frequent question asked of veterinarians by sheep men throughout Oregon is "What can I do for scours in my sheep or goats?" reports Dr. J. N. Shaw, head of the department of veterinarian medicine at Oregon State college.

While scours is only a symptom it is so common that the subject is treated in a bulletin entitled "Scours in Sheep and Goats in Oregon," first written some years ago but recently revised and brought up to date. Every serious outbreak of scours in sheep and goats observed by men of the department has been caused by parasites of some type, reports Dr. Shaw. At least five groups of these are believed to cause scours, four being different kinds of threadworms and the fifth a flatworm.

Correct diagnosis is of major importance in determining treatment. This is done either through a microscopic examination of the dung or by autopsy of a freshly killed affected animal.

Because all remedies that will destroy worms are more or less poisonous their use is recommended only where worms are known to be present, cautions Dr. Shaw. The best results are obtained where treatment is given at the first appearance of symptoms rather than after considerable death losses have occurred.

The use of phenothiazine, recently widely recommended by some experiment stations, has not been found as effective or practical under Oregon conditions as the standard treatment of tetrachlorethylene. Trials with Phenothiazine with the worms that cause most of the trouble in Oregon sheep have not given favorable results even when larger than recommended doses were used. Trials with this remedy mixed with salt for ewes and unweaned lambs, as recommended in some sections, are now in progress, hence it cannot be advocated yet under Oregon conditions.

Tetrachlorethylene is not expensive and can be obtained from most veterinarians and at many drug stores. When purchased in bulk and mixed with oil it can be used at a cost only a little more than one cent a dose.

In controlling flatworms or flukes carbon tetrachloride is a satisfactory remedy although a more complete system of control consists of either the destruction of snails that act as secondary hosts or the fencing of snail-infested areas so that sheep, cattle and goats do not pasture in them.

HUMAN TEARS TO KILL GERMS
Contain Most Powerful Germicide Known

"Although weeping is generally an evidence of sorrow," declares an article in The American Weekly, "tears themselves are more or less a blessing. Most people know that tears are salt, because they can taste the salt when the tears run down their faces and come into contact with the lips. But the real composition of tears is basically a chemical called Lysozyme, probably the most powerful germ-killer in the world."

"During experiments with human tears it has been found that one teaspoonful of the pure chemical contained in them has antiseptic powers equal to more than a hundred gallons of salty water, against certain eye bacteria."

"The same substance can be found in the white corpuscles of the blood, which continually wage war on destructive bacteria invading the body."

So again we see that the natural way of protecting the body against bacterial disease lies within the body itself. Only the body that is already sub-normal (diseased) becomes the breeding ground of objectionable bacteria. Keep well with Chiropractic!
