

OPA Lumber Office Opened at Portland

Portland has been named regional OPA headquarters for the lumber enforcement division. Richard G. Montgomery, district director, announced last week. Jerome S. Bischoff, formerly chief attorney of the OPA Klamath Falls office, has been appointed chief of the lumber enforcement unit, San Francisco regional office, but will be stationed in the Bedell building, Portland.

Bischoff will supervise all lumber enforcement activities in the region which includes Oregon, Washington, California, Arizona, Nevada and part of Idaho. Montgomery explained. He will direct the activities of OPA district offices along these lines and will prepare and try lumber violation cases, working in collaboration with the Department of Justice to enforce price regulations on fir, pine and cedar lumber, logs, and agricultural and industrial box shooks.

Numerous complaints of lumber price violations, such as up-grading, short tally and improper freight charges have been coming in, Bischoff reports, particularly relating to lumber sold by mills and wholesalers to governmental agencies and the army and navy.

CAUTION CATTLE OWNERS ABOUT FERN POISONING

A caution to cattle owners that some cattle are experiencing so-called fern poisoning, which may be confused with anthrax because symptoms are similar, is given by the state department of agriculture. Fern poisoning has been reported in recent weeks in Lane, Linn, Benton, Clackamas and some parts of Multnomah counties. A few cases involving horses have been reported from Polk county.

As long as cattle have other feed, they are not apt to eat ferns and so one of the best remedies is to keep cattle moving about if there is sufficient pasture. Supplementary feeding with other bulky feed, such as clean hay, at the time when pasture is short also will reduce the chances for this trouble.

Symptoms of fern poisoning are described as follows: Sudden illness, an extremely high temperature, difficult breathing, salivation, nasal bleeding, hemorrhages of various organs and fever rash of the visible mucosae.

TO THE LEGIONNAIRES

I know this town is quite some pumpkins. Bonds? bought by the thousands of dollars worth. Aircraft observation?—They get medals for hundreds of hours of service. Milk fund drive? by the Lions—way over; Red Cross and Boy Scout drives?—way over; Legion 1st record drive—way over quota! Membership 1943—way over for the Post and Auxiliary! Now! Our present drive for cigarettes for the boys, 2 cases sent and enough for 2 more on hand! Very fine going here! Our new drive for records—coming swell!

Here's the meat of the nut, gang!

September 20th we install officers for 1944. Several district gushed guests will be here, perhaps the Governor—certainly the new district commander—½ our membership has paid in. Come on you balance. Let's put Calvin Funk out ahead this time. Give the 3rd district commander a paid up check and all the cards—on September 20th. "Can we do it?" you "know" we can! This is Cottage Grove where we do things! Oregon leads the nation!—Edw. Gotch, Comm.-elect.

MORE RECAPS, FEWER TIRES

August quotas of new tires will be smaller but more used and recapped tires will be available, the OPA announced Monday at Portland.

The smallest allotment of new tires since April will include for Oregon 10,631 grade 1, 7,055 grade 3, 11,200 tubes, 8,610 truck and bus tires, 5,147 farm implement tires.

KEM'S for DRUGS

The Rexall Store

Now that we've got some much needed house cleaning done, including a fresh coat of paint on the store interior, we feel quite refreshed. Along with this uplift we received another in the form of fresh merchandise, about two tons, so we are again able to supply many items we have been short of for many weeks. Better give us another "once over" we might have what YOU want.
