HE OUGHT TO BE IN THE ARMY.

How frequently have you heard the remark, "He ought to be in the army." Such remarks are often made without knowing the facts in the case, which is an injustice to the person referred to. The selective service boards adopted a good rule several months ago with a view to heading off just such criticism and perhaps here it would be well to repeat it. Every week selective service board 3 for instance calls up men for induction into the armed services, but newspapers are not permitted to publish such lists until these men have passed their physical and are actually inducted into service, for if a boy is known to have gone up for induction and fails to pass his examination or if deferred for some other good reason, his return home places him in a critical light.

A service officer for the veterans organizations remarked the other day that he was getting good and tired of this question being asked him. Confidently if we were in a critical attitude we would go easy on asking this man such questions without knowing the facts, otherwise he might tell us something that would make our faces turn red.

We have no quarrel with the service boards, draft boards to you for the manner in which they have handled the individual cases. Rather we have thought that perhaps our local boards were a bit over zealous in supplying more than our quota of men, but in the light of recent events with a heavy call for more and more men, the attitude of the boards may have been right.

We do think however, that some of the men have been misplaced after they have been called into service and have been put to tasks that they are absolutely unfitted for. This is the fault of the army, and not the draft boards.

CHANGES COMING

War has not only revolutionized much of our present day method of living, but unless all signs fail will affect our post war standards of living just as much. Changes are coming and we might as well be prepared to accept them. The majority will be for the better, some will be for the worse. Of those that may be for the worse, we have the power to lessen the effect of their attendant evils.

The only way to escape the impending changes so far as we know is to build a fence around our section of the country and take to the hills. But we hardly believe such methods would be practical. There might have been a time in the history of our section of the country when such methods would have been more practical, but the more we progress in our so-called civilization, the harder it is to shut ourselves away from it.

Fear of the changes does not emanate so much from the fact that we are promised more conveniences and easier methods of living, but to attempt to change our social, moral and spiritual standards, many of which are regarded as fixed as they have been fixed for a long period of time. To tamper with these would be to undermine our present social and governmental structures.

This prospect is of real concern to those to believe in democracy and the safe guards we have built around it to preserve it. When these safe guards are thrown overboard for some new order as some may believe the times call for, we will find as many European nations have found that freedom is difficult to maintain, but easy to lose.

INCUMBENT THE ISSUE

In 1932 the issue was Hoover; Roosevelt went in merely because the people were determined to put Hoover out. If the democrats had nominated somebody else, Hoover would have been the issue just the same, and whomsoever the democrats nominated would have been elected. The lesson is, that the opposition party should nominate the best man, as if its nominee is to be elected anyway, the welfare of the country depends on the choice made in the party convention. This year, 1944, Roosevelt is the issue. If the people are determined to vote him out, whomsoever the republicans nominate will be the next president. If Dewey is nominated by the republicans, the disillusionment will come after the election, as it did following 1932.

Woodburn Independent.

Eric Johnston is that rare combination, a skillful and experienced business man with a keen sense of social responsibility; if he were nominated for president and elected he would prove to be one of the most capable, constructive and satisfactory chief executives this country has had.

Fruit Peelings The peel of oranges, lemons and other citrus fruits contain about three times as much vitamin C as the pulp and the juice. Add gratings of the peel to sauces, spreads and desserts.	Mixed With Mercury One chore of bismuth takes it into every home. It is mixed with mercury to form the amalgam that "silvers" mirrors. Another amalgam of bismuth and mercury, in different proportions, is used for making self-lubricating bearings for some machinery.
Swedish Saw With a Swedish steel pulpwood saw, one man working in the woods alone can cut pulpwood to cord lengths almost as fast as two men working with the usual crosscut saw.	Final Run Approximately 20 nervous seconds elapse between the time a bomber goes into its final run and the time it pulls out and heads for home.

LION ROARS

(Marie Lombard and Laurene Miller, Editors)

Primary Election
Bob Bauder and Bob Wicks were nominated for student body president in the primary elections last Friday. Other student body nominees are as follows: Bob Moore and Bob Gleason for vice president, Chloris Roberts and Pat Dunlop for secretary, Eileen Harpole and Marie Lombard for treasurer, Alan Aspey and Sara Bjorset for business manager, Joyce Clark and Irene Schaffer for advertising manager, Eva Hopman for editor.

Final election will be held Friday, April 14.

White Clothing Is Scarce in Jungles

Bougainville, (Delayed) — Lessons in what the properly dressed jungle fighter wears are learned during a campaign. Marines in the Bougainville offensive, for example, found that even the slightest bit of white detracted from their camouflage.

Early in the offensive, Marines on patrol frequently had to hit the ground in all sorts of postures. They soon found that often their dungaree trouser legs would hitch up and show the tops of their white or gray-white socks. After a few men were hit when their positions in the dense jungles were betrayed, the marines painted their socks green or discolored them in some manner.

In equipment left behind by the Japanese when the Marines drove them off "Hellzapoppin' Ridge," only one piece of white equipment was found in abandoned packs and other equipment. It was a white silk shirt bearing the trade-mark of a Sydney, Australia, manufacturer.

The shirt was folded neatly and jammed into the bottom of a pack when found.

"I wonder what the story is behind the possession of that shirt," mused one fellow. "Was the soldier ever in Sydney or did he steal it from an island planter in a raid?"

MONKEY BUSINESS

On a lovely, little island in a sunny southern sea,
Lived a chattering tribe of monkeys; they were happy as could be.
They lived on nuts and foliage and each one had his share,
There was always enough to go around and often more to spare.

While some of them were satisfied, there were some who seemed to feel,
That if they had a leader they would get a better deal.
So they had a big election and they did the thing up grand,
They chose a great big monkey, the largest in the land.

He made a great acceptance speech, he said, MY friends, I guess
You have named the proper monkey to straighten out the mess.
He said, "If we would prosper how plainly I can see,
We must take half the coconuts and throw them in the sea.

And then a little later when the peanuts start to grow,
We will have to work together and dig up every other row."
So they dug up half the peanuts, they worked for days and days,
For he had promised them a profit for the ones they didn't raise.

But later in the season in the leader's first report,
They found the crop of coconuts was very, very short.
Now the little baby monkeys with their hair as soft as silk,
Depend upon the coconuts for their supply of milk.

And before the common monkeys knew what it was all about,
The smart ones cornered all the feed and they were left without.
Now the stronger ones are hungry and the weaker ones are dead
And the scheme to help the country is sadly in the red.

Of course, it's monkey business; we shouldn't make a fuss,
But what if some big ape, should pull that stunt on us.

EFFECTS OF ALCOHOL ON THE HUMAN BODY

The most damaging effects of alcohol are felt by the delicate tissues of the brain and the nervous system. When a person takes a drink of liquor, it promptly muddles his thinking, weakens his judgment, and lessens his control over his actions. It paralyzes his brain centers upon which depend memory, imagination, judgment and reason. The alcoholic is soon unable to distinguish fact from fancy. Alcohol stupifies the brain.

Alcohol drugs the higher moral faculties as well as the mental powers. It arouses the primitive passions at the very time when all the powers of self-control and self-restraint are removed.

As a result, it is reliably shown that in the United States before 1920, alcohol was responsible for 25% of the insane, 40% of the neglected and abandoned children, 50% of the convicts in prisons, and 80% of the inmates of jails and workhouses. The effect of alcohol on the individual is to destroy him, body, mind and soul.

The center and heart of the liquor problem is expressed in this question: "Is there any harm in moderate drinking?"

One of the newest of the briefer scientific manuals is published by

ECZEMA DUE TO NAIL POLISH

Allergic eczema due to nail polish has been reported recently as being a rather common condition.

Thirteen patients with contact-type eczema showed positive reaction to five different kinds of nail polish, the allergen apparently being a formaldehyde-sulfonamide resin used in the manufacture. Twelve of the thirteen patients had complete relief when they avoided the nail lacquer; no notes were available on the thirteenth.

Characteristic symptoms were described as redness, swelling, itching or scaling of the eyelids, neck, ear canals, chin, cheeks, armpits, upper arm near the elbow, and in the depression below the collarbone. The eyelids were affected in 12 of the 13 cases, the author stating the belief that nail polish is the commonest cause of contact-type eczema of the eyelids among women in this country.—Nutri News.

School and College Service, Columbus, Ohio: "Alcohol Talks To Youth", by Prof. Hamlin, a physiologist. The principal data about moderate drinking are: alcohol in moderation has no appreciable food value—indeed its food value is nil; alcohol has an amazing affinity for nerve cells, and attacks them immediately upon being consumed; a very little alcohol slows down the reaction of an individual until he is a menace to traffic and in the factory where high-powered machinery is in use; moderate drinking dulls that delicate quality of personality known as the critical faculty or the power of self-judgment. It has been said that 1/10 of 1% of alcohol taken into the body will tend to slow down the reaction. What about 3.2% or more?

Medals Won by Marines

MEDAL OF HONOR  The Congressional Medal of Honor (Navy) is America's highest award for heroism on land, sea or in the air. It is awarded for valor and intrepidity above and beyond the call of duty. Established in December, 1861, it is awarded in the name of the Congress of the United States. The medal is worn about the neck.	BREVET MEDAL  The Brevet Medal of the Marine Corps has not been awarded in recent years. It was originally awarded subordinates (officers or men) who were forced by circumstances of battle to lead landing parties or detachments after their commanding officers had become casualties.
NAVY CROSS  The Navy Cross is awarded for extraordinary heroism in the line of duty. It ranks in third position following the Brevet Medal. A small gold star on this decoration and service ribbon indicates a second award of the same decoration. This medal was established in 1919.	LEGION OF MERIT  The award of the Legion of Merit is made to outstanding officers and enlisted men for "extraordinary fidelity and essential service." It constitutes a reward for service in a position of responsibility, honorably and well performed. It stems from the Badge of Military Merit, established in 1782.
DISTINGUISHED SERVICE MEDAL  The Distinguished Service Medal is awarded those whose exercise of extraordinary good judgment in a position of great responsibility and whose outstanding performance of duty reflect credit on American Naval arms. It was established in 1918.	DISTINGUISHED FLYING CROSS  The Distinguished Flying Cross is conferred upon any member of the air forces of the United States who, while serving in any capacity, distinguishes himself by heroism or extraordinary achievement while participating in aerial flight. The medal is identical in all services.
SILVER STAR  The Silver star, instituted in 1935, is granted to persons serving in any capacity with the armed forces of the nation cited for gallantry in action which does not warrant the award of the Medal of Honor or the Distinguished Service Cross. It replaces the tiny Silver Citation Star of 1917-1918.	NAVY AND MARINE CORPS MEDAL  The new Navy and Marine Corps Medal is awarded persons in the Navy and Marine Corps for acts of heroism other than those performed in actual combat with the enemy. It has been granted for courageous conduct such as rescues at sea.
AIR MEDAL  The Air Medal is awarded to any person who, while serving in any capacity with the armed forces of the United States, distinguishes himself by meritorious achievement while participating in aerial flight. It is granted in cases where the act of meritorious service does not warrant the Distinguished Flying Cross.	PURPLE HEART  The Purple Heart, originally established by General George Washington in 1782, was not issued for many years. It was reestablished in 1932, and made retroactive to cover awards to all officers and men who were wounded in action in any war or campaign under conditions entitling them to wear a wound chevron.
