DECISION A MUST IN POST WAR PROJECTS

The nation has been urged to hurry along post war planning to avoid the confusion incidental to the absorption of the armed forces into the civilian life as was witnessed during 1918-19. So far little or nothing has been done locally to insure any sort of local program which might bring both employment and needed improvements.

It ought not be necessary to point out again that either the communities will take steps to inaugurate a proper post war program at the proper time or the government will do this for us. The proposition resolves itself into whether we shall make an effort to help ourselves or wait for the government to do it for us and thus aid the growing bureaucracy.

Nobody knows at this instance just how the post war picture will shape up, but we can make a good guess and guess that federal aid will be available for the launching of some projects, particularly as they may apply to sanitation on the order of a sewer disposal plant. Wherever federal aid is offered we have our choice of accepting it or rejecting it and if we reject it, we will continue to go without what might be termed a needed facility and help the other fellow pay for his.

How much of the post war program or projects will be financed by the federal government is up to the people. The projects thus financed can be held to a small number and the remainder can be financed locally, or we can permit the government to step in and make another program for us which might be on the order of a leaf raking campaign.

Which ever course we take, should be decided now. We might point out that the way of the least resistance is to do nothing, plan nothing and sit back and wait to see what happens, but in the end we can be assured that little or nothing will be gained in the way of constructive improvement and we may not be able to gauge the cost by the results.

We may also run into further difficulty if we can not agree on what the community and section need the worst. Here are some of the things suggested as post war projects: Some of the city officials say the No. 1 post war project is a sewer disposal plant. Others: improvement of our water system and streets. Civic organizations are also backing a high school stadium or a high school stadium and swimming pool.

SUBSIDIES BUT POOR EXCUSES

"Because of their uncertainties as to amount and duration," says Ernest C. Strobeck, Secretary of the Dairyman's League Association, "subsidies are no substitute for price for bringing about increased production. A farmer has to plan. The grass seed he sows this spring is not turned into milk until a year from next winter. He has to finance his production program for months and years before cashing in. His experience with subsidies thus far teaches him that they are unreliable and slow in payment."

FEWER NEW CARS

Fewer persons will be eligible to buy new 1942 cars after June 23, Edmond W. Eggen, district OPA rationing representative, announced today. The list of eligibles is being reduced because of the small number of new 1942 cars available for rationing, he explained. Doctors, nurses, ministers, war workers and others engaged in work essential to the war effort or to public health and safety are on the eligible list, Eggen said.

OBSESITY IN CHILDREN

It is a trait of human nature to enjoy feeding animals, or one's fellows. There seems to be an especial urge to give food to children. In this growing stage they are likely to have a good appetite. When such generosity leads to overweight, the kindness is utterly misplaced. Eating between meals is objectionable. Obese children seldom have a proper diet. They usually do not care for vegetables and salads. They often show a lack of social maturation. Some of them at the age of 10 are still being bathed and dressed by their mothers, and are not allowed to play alone with other children. The effect on behavior may be bad. Such boys and girls are likely to be pampered and uncooperative. They may be laying up trouble for their future years. It is important to character building that they be taught to control their whims and desires. Training should begin at an early age.—From Good Health.
