

Average Citizen Reels Under Post War Predictions

WASHINGTON.—The average citizen is all for this better world business, but his brain is reeling under a barrage of post war predictions which range from a helicopter for every household to a federated world state.

It may help to remember that about nine-tenths of these post-war projects are either in the preliminary blueprint stage or the realm of dreams.

Uncle Sam already has wrapped up for delivery only one big post-war package — veterans' benefits, including the GI law and must-out pay for servicemen and women.

Some post-war prospects belong in the fairly certain class. Most business experts agree that, despite possible unemployment spots caused by the shift from war to peace production, the demand for consumer goods will be enormous. Seasoned business men, however, caution citizens not to expect too many miracle products.

World air transport is getting ready to go places, although the day of cheap trans-Atlantic holidays is hardly in sight. More than 100 applications for international routes are now on file with the Civil Aeronautics Board.

Air transport service in this country will be extended to many smaller cities not now on routes.

The railroads, bolstered by heavy war revenues, are planning to make train travel more attractive and less expensive. Fleets of streamliners, the last word in cushioned and air conditioned comfort, will try to hold a sizeable portion of their huge wartime traffic. Some railway officials suggest a reduction in coach fare to one cent a mile to compete with private autos, buses and planes. Faster schedules will be another lure for the traveler.

The demand for new homes, it is estimated, will be well over a million a year for ten years. The housing committee of the Twentieth Century Fund has figured that the need for houses will be greatest in the $2,000 to $4,000 class, most probably for rent.

Homes in higher price ranges will boast "dream kitchens," "patalial bathrooms" and numerous flip-of-the-finger conveniences, but the specific answer to what you will get for $6,000, or $8,000, or $10,000 isn't known now. Air conditioning will be one of the big developments.

Many men will remain in the post-war armed forces. Polls of the public and of members of Congress indicate a large majority favor maintenance of a powerful air force and navy, together with a system of universal military training for the youth of the country.

POWER AND RESOURCES

MAKE OREGON A GREAT COUNTRY.

A great country to live in, a great country to fight for, a great country to build for the future.

Oregon's power and resources are helping to fight the war—and they will help to build the peace. Greatest of all our resources is the forest. Forest products are the number one critical war material, and are playing a vital part on every battle front and every transport line around the world. Forest products will help to rebuild a war-torn world after the war. Lumbering, logging, and new wood chemical industries, aided by power, will help to provide employment in the post war period.

Green growing forests, and the white cascades of tumbling water power, symbolize the basic strength of this great Oregon country. If we would keep this land as one worth living in, we must keep our forests green and productive. They in turn will furnish the raw materials of industry, and keep our streams flowing.

Therefore, forest fire prevention is good, patriotic citizenship. And forest fire prevention is a job for every one of us. It takes only one spark to start a raging conflagration, when the wind and weather are right. So now, all of us, check up on our habits with fire in the woods—think, talk, act, forest fire prevention. That way we can each do our part to—
