Japanese Vessels Trapped Off Saipan

U. S. Marines have a grandstand view as artillerymen shell Japanese vessels in Tanapah harbor. Fleeing Japs tried to escape from Saipan in a few ships they had anchored in the harbor but they didn't quite make it. The puffed oil drums in the foreground are part of an enemy dump which suffered direct hits from American naval gunfire.

THE MOUSTACHE PLATOON

WITH THE 2ND INFANTRY DIVISION IN FRANCE: If you can't grow a moustache, you don't belong in a certain platoon, now called the "Moustache Boys," of the 2nd Infantry Division.

The platoon agreed on the lip adornment some three weeks ago and with the exception of about three men who haven't been able to sprout anything yet, all members are now moustached.

Platoon Sergeant Norman H. Blackmore of Cottage Grove, Oregon, who sees to it that none of the lip whiskers are shaved off, says the men would grow beards if it wasn't for a rule prohibiting them.

They plan to keep the moustaches until the war is over.
