THE POWER OF OREGON POWER!

In this latest advertisement appearing in national magazines, emphasis is placed on the great pool of low-cost hydroelectric power available to industry in the Oregon country—one of our greatest assets—and the way this ties in with use of our basic resources, our manpower, our transportation facilities, our many sites for industrial locations.

This series, sponsored by The Oregonian and directed to management throughout the nation, is having a marked effect in attracting interest in the advantages of this great region.

Oregon WHERE 'WHITE GOLD' FLOWS UNLIMITED INTO INDUSTRY

Oregon's economic strength, she also "has what it takes" in these assets:

Location: Hub of a huge Western market; natural gateway of trans-Pacific trade. Transportation: Inland "deepsea" ports, rail, truck and air. Resources: Fourth of nation's saw timber, minerals, diversified agriculture, even climate, abundant pure water. Manpower: Thousands of skilled industrial workers. Plant sites presently still are available and reasonably priced in this state "Farthest West." And Oregon still has its friendly welcome for the new-comer seeking industrial opportunity.

Strength from water—1210 tumbling miles of it—spells opportunity in Oregon.

In the Columbia river, alone, great dams—spectacular Bonneville and Grand Coulee—capture the tremendous power of this cascading stream as it drops out of the Rocky mountains.

Combined with a network of public and private power plants, these big dams form a 2700-mile grid which amounts to a 3,500,000-kilowatt pool. The results: Lowest industrial power rate in the nation, approximating two mills per kilowatt hour at 100 per cent load factor anywhere on the grid.

Waste "white gold" forms the backbone of
