RUN OVER THE SON-OF-A-GUN

Back in the days when auto owners were classed as plutocrats and pedestrians were pedestrians, a driver was herding his flivver down a one-way road. Down a little way he tried to pass a pedestrian going in the same direction.

We thought about this story when we attended a zoning meeting at the city hall Friday night. The matter of building well or of providing the necessary sanitary facilities or of laying out streets and alleys is fine provided the rules and regulations does not cramp our style.

The idea that a man's home is his castle may have been basically sound to start with, but it has proved to be a stumbling block in trying to keep pace with modern demands.

Any sort of building code is designed for the protection of the builder and by following out the suggestion contained in the building code, the building can be assured of a better building both from the standpoint of a well constructed building as well as from the sanitation or fire hazard angle.

A building code in any locality should be looked on as a help rather than so much red tape. An inspection by a man trained to know buildings will save trouble later.

What any growing municipality needs is a building code which is enforced and a zoning ordinance.

LITTLE COTTAGE GROVE WINS AGAIN

'Little Cottage Grove wins again, to retain its lead in district 3' was the way press dispatches referred to the Cottage Grove-Roseburg game last week end. A stranger would naturally draw the conclusion that the high school here was so small Coach Dusenberry was having difficulty in keeping eleven men on the field.

THOUGHTLETS

By Carl B. Balch

Ordinary men, God inspired, may become extraordinary men.

It now begins to appear that part of the labor troubles rests with leaders of industry.

The beginning of public sentiment starts with an unpopular pioneer.

Each one of us measures the other fellow by his own standard.

We know that we should have balanced meals for our physical needs, also should have balanced diet for our spiritual needs.

God compensates the handicapped, if the handicapped will but let him.

To be persistent, insistent and consistent keeps one mentally active.

One can argue himself into thinking that whatever he wants to do is right.

Bitterness clouds one's mind, injures one's friendship and ruins one's digestion.

He that takes time to think and consider will act more wisely than he that acts hastily and on impulse.
