A Moment of Retrospection

The birthdays of both Geo. Washington and Abraham Lincoln are celebrated this month.

If they could view the country today, would they find the freedom for which they fought or would they find a people half slave and half free? Would they find men freely engaged in various enterprises or a people bewildered by a multiplicity of bureaus, offices, administrations, orders, and directives?

Many changes have occurred since the days of these great men but the ideals for which they labored are still fundamental truths. The equality of men and their right to freely engage in private enterprise without tyrannical dictation are freedoms worth fighting for and unless the "AMERICAN WAY" is to be abandoned these freedoms must be maintained.
