Drainage Speeded Use of AAA Aid

The agricultural conservation program is helping many Oregon farmers overcome the problem of "too much water in the wrong places at the wrong times," according to a report from E. H. Miller, chairman of the state PMA committee.

As an example of the use being made of drainage practices in the conservation program, Miller cited two projects reported by the Lake county AAA committee. On the J. F. Hansen ranch, Dry Creek district, 6,200 feet of drainage ditches were constructed under the program, converting 300 acres of meadow on which water stood the year around into productive hay and pasture land.

Mark Maddock, Lakeview, recently bought 40 acres of land near the county fair grounds on which previous operators had tried unsuccessfully to raise grain, only to have it flooded out every year. He solved the flood problem by constructing 2,000 feet of drain ditch along two sides of the field. Farmers with drainage problems are advised by Miller to consult their county or community AAA committeemen for information on practice program assistance.

O. & C. OFFICE LISTS JAN. 7 SALE

A total of 86,190,000 feet of timber in the state will be offered to the highest bidder January 7th. Included in the sale will be 3,120,000 feet of Douglas Fir in the Siuslaw area, six miles west of Lorne. Last Thursday the O. & C. Administration announced at Portland the first sale since the OPA went off, edged the OPA ceiling by 3.7 percent. Five of the tracts offered at this time received no bids.

2,4-D Weed Spray Shows Good Kill In Grain Fields

Widespread use of the weed killer 2,4-D for many purposes on Oregon farms is justified by results of controlled experiments and field use, reports W. G. Nibler, assistant farm crops specialist at Oregon State college.

Treating fields of grain and common rye grass infested with Canada thistle, wild pea, hairy vetch and morning glories will probably become standard practice judging from results so far, Nibler says. While Canada thistles have not been killed by this hormone spray, seed formation is prevented and the roots are weakened.

More than 2000 acres of grain and grass were sprayed effectively for control of these weed pests in 1946, Nibler reports. Sprayed barley fields infested with Canada thistle yielded as well as clean fields. Similar results were obtained with oats and wheat.

Several common rye grass fields which were ruined for seed last year by volunteer hairy vetch and wild pea, gave excellent yields this year when sprayed with 2,4-D. Grain fields were cleared of vetch in the same manner.

Wild morning glory can be killed if two or three applications of the 2,4-D are made at the proper time. In Columbia basin grain fields spraying with this weed killer has eliminated peppergrass and mustard when these were very small, increasing yields materially.

Spraying is now the most common method of applying 2,4-D but improved dusts are being developed which show promise of providing a quicker and cheaper method of use.

MOOSE CHRISTMAS PARTY

Members of the Moose lodge are planning a Christmas party for all members of this lodge with their families tomorrow evening, December 20th at the Moose lodge hall.

County agents are ready to give interested farmers reports on local trials of this material and to explain the best local methods of application. A preliminary bulletin on use of 2,4-D is also available at county extension offices.

Vern Hawn, former district governor of the Lions and a past president of the Eugene club, presided at the organizational meeting. Hawn was accompanied by eight Eugene Lions.

Do you think steel profits are big?

Recently in a nation-wide poll most people guessed that steel profits were about 20 cents on each dollar of sales. They said 10 cents would be about right.

Actually, for the past ten years steel company profits have averaged less than 5 cents on each dollar of sales.

Although profits continue low, wages, employment and production are near record levels.

The number of wage earners is not far from the highest in peacetime steel history—20 per cent above the 1929 level.

Weekly wages in steel industry in the third quarter of 1946 were 63% higher than in 1939.

Despite strikes earlier in the year, steel production in 1946 was headed toward a new peacetime record until the November coal strike.

Average profit per dollar of sales in 1946 is lower than it was in most good prewar years.
