When God gave out brains, I thought He said trains, and I missed mine; When He gave out looks, I thought He said books, and I didn't want any; When He gave out noses, I thought He said roses, and I ordered a big one; When He gave out legs, I thought He said kegs, and I ordered two fat ones; When He gave out ears, I thought He said beers, and I ordered two long ones; When He gave out chins, I thought He said gins, and I ordered a double one; Lordy! Ain't I a mess! — Swiped.

Lane 4-H Members Can Participate In Health Program

Lane county 4-H Clubs have an opportunity to take part in a new national program of health improvement, according to word received this week by E. A. Danielson, County Club Agent for Lane county. The new health program offers a certificate to the winning club in each county; $20.00 cash awards to the ten top clubs in the state; and a free trip to the national 4-H club congress in Chicago for the club member having the most outstanding individual health achievement in the state.

All local 4-H clubs enrolled during the year in a 4-H health project or activity may take part. Donor of the awards in the national program is the Kellogg Co., Battle Creek, Michigan.

In judging accomplishments of the clubs competing, attention will be given both to the individual health activities of the members and to the health improvement program for the club as a whole — with special emphasis on results.

L. J. Allen, acting state club leader of the Oregon State College Extension Service, states that the new health improvement program has three objectives:

To help 4-H members and their leaders gain a personal consciousness and understanding of physical and mental health consistent with advancing standards and scientific knowledge.

To help youth share in the responsibility for improving the home and community health conditions.

To help young people grow and develop sound bodies and mature personalities.

Oregon Outlook For Farm Labor Much Brighter

The outlook for farm labor in Oregon this year is the brightest since before the war, county farm labor assistants agreed in a recent state wide farm labor staff conference at Oregon State College.

The O. S. C. extension service men who manage county farm labor offices in the different counties reported a decided improvement in the quality of farm helpers and in the number of them available. Placements of workers in farm jobs by the county farm labor offices are from 50 to 100 per cent higher than a year ago, according to J. R. Beck, state farm labor supervisor.

Two factors that are expected to contribute to an improved farm labor situation in Oregon this year are the newly established information stations to aid migratory workers in locating jobs and increased housing facilities on farms that will make it easier for migrant workers to find a place to stay.

The information centers are a new development in the farm labor program for the western states this year. Three of the 16 to be located in the seven western states began operating April 1 in Oregon — at Huntington, Biggs and Junction City.

Through cooperation of the state farm labor offices and the federal extension service, the stations will be kept supplied with current information concerning labor supplies and requirements throughout the west. They will guide migrant workers to areas where help is needed. County farm labor offices, however, will continue to be the local points through which farmers seeking help and workers seeking jobs are brought together.

Farmers throughout the state have made remarkable progress in providing increased housing facilities for farm workers despite high building costs and shortage of materials, Beck says.

Oregon requirements for farm workers from outside the state will begin to rise about the middle of April, Beck predicts. The state's first peak requirements for farm labor will be for sugar beet blocking and thinning in Malheur county about May 1.

Shoe Care

To make shoes wear longer give them good treatment. If heels wear unevenly, have them repaired before they are permanently damaged. Do not dry your shoes too near the stove or fire since too much heat will harm leather. Keep them clean and well polished.
