

First Idaho House
Near Clark Fork, Ida., on Pend d'Oreille lake, David Thompson and a party of trappers representing the Hudson Bay company in 1809 built a small trading post they called Kullyspell House. This was the first house built in Idaho.

Cockroaches Serve Purpose
Believe it or not, cockroaches actually serve a useful purpose, for they are being used in the study of amino acids of insects. The work will answer some of the questions on growth, development and fecundity as affected by the amino acids.

HEATING ELEMENTS
SURROUND TANK

—No Immersion
—No Red Glow

Because the heating element on a Fowler Electric Water Heater is designed to operate "black," you are assured of a long-life heater. The element surrounds the tank, contacting it with a broad surface heating area which enables lower element temperatures and prevents the trouble-making red glow. Non-immersion of the element into the tank makes unnecessary the cutting of entries, thus eliminating sources of service trouble. High efficiency insulation combines with the highly polished aluminum reflector, which reflects the heat rays back into the tank, to reduce heat loss to a minimum. Fowler's economy temperature control is automatic and adjustable to your water temperature preference by simply turning the dial. Porcelining the glass-like inside finish, keeps water ever clean. And with delivery of your long-lasting economical Fowler Electric Water Heater, you receive a 20-year replacement guarantee. Place your Fowler order today.

THOUGHTLETS

By Earl B. Balch

According to the new Presidential Succession law which the President has just signed, if President Truman should die during his term of office, Speaker of the House, Joe Martin would become president. A number of women do not believe the president will live to the end of his term. Immediately after the president signed the new measure, Speaker Martin, who is a bachelor, has received many letters from women hoping that they may become the nation's first lady.

Society does have standards. But she never made the standards herself. There must be men and women courageous enough to proclaim standards and mould public sentiment until society can reach a higher standard.

A distinguished religious editor says: "Food is politics." This is literally true. If Europe is reasonably well fed during the next year, the spread of communism will be greatly lessened.

One often wonders if the far eastern lands that are aspiring to independence are at all ready for self-government. The insurrections in Indonesia, the political assassinations in Burma and the Moslem and Hindu riots in India are cases in point.

It is almost a year until the national conventions of the chief political parties gather, and nearly fourteen months until election time, but political devotees are already gathering the sticks to start the fires for the proverbial political pot boiling.

If some one tries to impose his will against the majority wishes of his club, lodge or other organization, he is apt to injure himself, and cause bitterness toward himself within the organization.

Some one has said that a nation that is unworthy of freedom will have its freedom taken away. There are nations in Europe that have lost their freedom for this reason and these far eastern peoples that are trying to obtain independence by violent means may find their liberty taken from them later.
