Observe Rules and Prevent Fires

Because of the particularly dry winter and spring season and the great amount of natural resources in forest and woodland in California, Oregon, Washington, Arizona, Nevada, Montana and Utah, a grave fire hazard faces the Pacific Coast region.

More than 175,000 forest fires every year in the United States consume 25,000,000 acres of valuable timber and watershed—an area as large as Virginia. This direct loss to natural resources amounts to over $36,000,000.

Most forest and brush fires are preventable. A survey made for President Truman's Conference on Fire Prevention held in Washington last May showed that almost all fires in forests start because of careless smokers and improperly handled campfires.

Observance of two main rules would help prevent a large proportion of the fires:

1. Don't build campfires except in designated campground areas. Make sure you put out your campfire before leaving it.

2. Don't smoke in forest areas. Don't throw cigarettes from your automobile.

READJUSTMENT ALLOWANCES SET AS

JULY 25, 1947

Termination date of the war under the federal-state program of readjustment allowances for unemployed and self-employed veterans has been set as July 25, 1947, according to word received by Silas Gaiser, administrator for the Oregon Unemployment Compensation Commission.

"This means that World War II veterans discharged before July 26, 1947, will have until July 25, 1949, to draw their allowances if eligible," explained Mr. Gaiser. "Those discharged since July 26 last will have two years from date of leaving the service."

Congressional action on substituting the new date for "termination of the war" in Title V of the G-I Bill of Rights came during the closing days of the 1947 session. State agencies have been administering the readjustment allowance program on the same basis as unemployment compensation under state laws.

With many veterans now having benefit rights under both state and federal plans, Mr. Gaiser pointed out the importance of considering expiration dates in filing claims. Both types of claims are handled through the Oregon Commission's 29 local employment offices, where all information concerning weekly allowances, duration and expiration rights may be secured.

Since the G-I Bill went into effect three years ago, about 72,000 veterans or nearly half of those returning to Oregon have filed claims. Of the 1,658 who have exhausted their allowances, 818 were self-employed. Oregon veterans have received nearly $17 millions, of which 19 per cent has gone to those working for themselves.

Why does the South 6th st. district remain outside?

Just what ARE the benefits of town??

If the town is so wonderful—Why doesn't everyone living near the city limits rush to get inside them?

If there ARE NO benefits in incorporation—Why don't the rest of us inside the city dissolve the incorporation and resume our independence?
