How Saginaw Got Its Name Told In Publication

New York, Jan. 20—How nearby Saginaw got its name is told by Stewart Holbrook in his chapter of NORTHWEST HARVEST published today by The Macmillan Company.

Mr. Holbrook, who began writing while working in a British Columbia logging outfit, contributes to NORTHWEST HARVEST a chapter called The Epic of Timber. In it he says:

"The lumberjacks brought with them to the Northwest many names, including famous place names, a 'Portland' to Oregon, and 'Saginaw' to Oregon, Washington, and Idaho. To Washington, too, they brought a 'Machias,' celebrated in Main for sawdust, and a 'Stillwater,' cherished by both Maine and Minnesota lumberjacks. They brought the names of fabulous lumbermen, like Dubois and Deary and Griggs and Merrill and Holland and Pope and Talbot and Weyerhaeuser."

NORTHWEST HARVEST, subtitled A Regional Stock-Taking, is the printed record of the Writers' Typewriter covers for sale—The Sentinel.

Conference on the Northwest held at Reed College a year ago last fall, and is contributed to by fifteen distinguished writers and professional people who know their region well. In the book they set down their opinions concerning the cultural problems of the Northwest—past and present—and prospects for the future.

GRATKE AT PRESS CONFERENCE

UNIVERSITY OF OREGON, Eugene, January 20 (Special)—Heading a list of topflight speakers scheduled on the program of the 29th Annual Press Conference on the University of Oregon campus February 20-21, is Charles E. Gratke, foreign editor of the Christian Science Monitor and alumnus of the University of Oregon.

Gratke is being brought to the campus, according to Dean George Turnbull of the university's school of journalism, through the courtesy of the Eric W. Allen Memorial Fund, to address the conference and lecture to the school of journalism. This is the second annual lectureship under the fund. The first was held last year by J. S. Russell, farm editor of the Des Moines Register-Tribune.

Game Commission Sets Fish Rules

The Oregon State Game commission at its annual hearing held in Portland on January 9 tentatively formulated the angling regulations for the 1948 season. The hearing was recessed until Friday, January 23, at which time the regulations will come up for final consideration. The two week recess is provided so that tentative regulations may be publicized and individuals and sportsmen's groups given an opportunity to submit further recommendations.

Following is a condensed summary of the changes proposed for Douglas county:

Diamond lake, open season for trout not less than 10 inches June 26 to September 30, with bag limit of 15 pounds and 1 fish but not to exceed 5 fish in any 1 day, or 30 pounds and 2 fish but not to exceed 10 fish in any 7 consecutive days.

Fish, Buckeye, Cliff, Twin Lakes, open season June 26 to September 15.

Fish lake creek, open season June 26 to October 31.

Bag limit for Marie, Eel and Twin lakes is 5 fish but not to exceed 15 pounds and 1 fish in any 1 day, and 10 fish but not to exceed 30 pounds and 2 fish in any 7 consecutive days.

Opened to Angling: That part of Smith river above tide water.

That part of North Umpqua river between Winchester dam and highway bridge over North Umpqua river on Route 99.

All tributaries of North Umpqua below and including Steamboat creek except Little River and Rock creek.

That part of Lake creek and tributaries (inlet to Loon lake) below falls.

That part of the South Umpqua river from a point 50 yards above to a point 150 yards below South Umpqua falls.

All tributaries of North Ten Mile lake.

That part of Rock creek, a tributary of the North Umpqua, from the Rock creek dam downstream to the lower boundary line of Game commission hatchery property.

Opened to Angling: That part of Diamond lake lying northwesterly of a line beginning at a point on the north shore of said lake 800 feet northwest of the mouth of Bear creek, running thence diagonally across said lake to a marker on the west shore of said lake, being 7,450 feet north of the mouth of Silent creek.

RADIO RAY has this to say

We think that our first objective has been attained. This was to get people thinking and talking about Cottage Grove again. Anything, praise OR criticism, was preferable to the dead level of "What do WE care?"

Of course, should there be an attempt to "put something over", then talk or thought about it is the last thing wanted. We hope that no plans were upset on this account—we hope—or do we?

Since people are now talking about our town and its problems, how about awakening some of the old time spirit we used to show, back in the days when the C. G. Sentinel headlined such things as "HAPPY, JOSTLING, GOOD-NATURED THROG of 3000 enjoys Business Men's - Farmers' Picnic" and the city was talking about and boosting such things as the extension of the Oregon Electric RR to here; and the building of a streetcar line to the skating rink and swimming pool down at the end of 6th st.

And how about doing some things here to make us proud of our Home Town. Such as . . . we will outline next week.

Nitrogen Still Scarce; Prompt Orders Advised

A less plentiful supply of nitrogen fertilizer this year than any time during the past three years is predicted by Arthur S. King, soils specialist of the O.S.C. extension service, even though production is greater than ever before and there is no longer any diversion for war purposes.

"Farmers are using more fertilizer and available supplies are falling far short of demand," King explains. "The shortage of fertilizer is not confined to any one section of this country. It is world wide."

As to straight nitrogen fertilizers, however, the northwest is in a more favorable position than any other section of the country, according to King. The government-owned fertilizer plant at Salem, now operated under lease by the Columbia Metals corporation, has been a big factor in maintaining a nitrogen supply in this area.

To assist the plant at Salem in planning production schedules and for protection to themselves, growers and dealers will be wise in ordering fertilizer supplies this year well in advance of actual need, King states.

Originally the production of this plant was earmarked for government use by farmers in the three northwest states of Oregon, Washington and Idaho. This limitation no longer exists, King states, but company officials have indicated a desire to supply local needs first.

While ammonium sulfate has been available in substantial quantities in this area through the Salem plant, in the south and east the only nitrogen available to farmers has been in the form of complete fertilizers. Where only nitrogen is needed, the cost of complete fertilizers is several times that of straight nitrogen alone.

The United States has 81 per cent of all passenger automobiles in the world, the Oregon State Motor Association reports. There is less than seven per cent of the world's population in this country.

Automobile-pedestrian collisions continue to take the heaviest death toll in Oregon traffic, reports the Oregon State Motor Association in urging pedestrians to watch for approaching cars before starting across streets or highways.
