

SABINE TO JOIN U. OF O. FACULTY

UNIVERSITY OF OREGON, Eugene, May 3 (Special)—Gordon Arthur Sabine will arrive on the campus at the opening of fall term, 1948, to take up duties as assistant professor of journalism. His appointment was confirmed at the April meeting of the state board of higher education. A graduate of the University of Wisconsin, where he received his baccalaureate degree in 1939 and his master in 1941, Mr. Sabine has been doing graduate work at the University of Minnesota toward his doctor of philosophy degree. His major fields of study have been in journalism, economics, psychology, and political science.

More Milk Cows Needed to Meet Oregon Demand

Urgent need for more dairy cows on Oregon farms is apparent in view of prospects for continued population growth and the fact that cow numbers show an actual decline, declares H. P. Ewalt, O.S.C. extension dairyman.

In Oregon now, there are approximately 245,000 dairy animals. Meanwhile, Ewalt points out that as late as 1943 there were 290,000 head. In the pre-war year, 1940, there were 262,000 dairy cows on Oregon farms.

The extension dairyman states there are now fewer cows in the state than there have been any time during the past 14 years. There are also fewer yearling heifers than at any time during this same period. This fact indicates that herd replacements are going to be more difficult to obtain in the future, Ewalt states. Along the same line he says dairy calf numbers are low. In fact, the calf population is lower now than at any time since 1942.

Reason for the decline in dairy cow numbers are related to conditions brought about by the war, including scarcity and high cost of trained dairy workers. Ewalt states that high prices for other types of farm products such as seeds and grains brought about a shift from cows to other types of agriculture. With feed costs high, coupled with attractive meat prices, more rigid culling of low producing animals took place. As a result of this culling, Ewalt says the average production per animal in the state has shown a considerable jump, although there are not enough of these better animals to supply current milk needs.

For the best interests of the Oregon dairy industry, Ewalt says dairymen need more than ever before to use good sires, to test for production, and to save more good calves as steps toward having high producing, disease-free herds two, three or four years from now. Do not depend upon other dairymen for replacements, they might be using scrub bulls, Ewalt advises.

OSC Field Day Set for June 10

The 1948 agronomy field day will be held at the Oregon State college experiment station at Corvallis June 10 announces Dr. D. D. Hill, head of the farm crops department and field day director. The public is invited to attend.

Field day visitors will be organized into special observation groups and will be conducted on a five-hour tour of the three experiment station farms. They will see the corn, hop, flax, small grain and vegetable seed trials, new forage and seed crop varieties being developed and tested by the station, weed control experiments and cultural practice and fertilizer experiment trials. The first group tour will start at 9 a. m. Other groups will start whenever enough have arrived up until 10:30 o'clock.

Members of the farm crops department staff will be station at the various projects and will review the purposes and results of the experiments. County agents will serve as group guides.

This field day will be the only one conducted by the farm crops department this year, Dr. Hill explains. Visitors are asked to bring their own lunches. A special lunch area will be set up by the field day committee. The assembly point and other field day details will be announced later.

Invitations.—The Sentinel.

Howdy Folks: A little chewing gum stuck on the front of the pants keeps the napkin from skidding.

Which reminds our missus that etiquette is the difference between table manners and stable manners.

Etiquette forbids the use of fingers, but if food isn't clean enough to pick up with fingers it's not fit to eat.

Of course the girl who looks sweet enough to eat probably does.

But beware of the girl who likes to eat her cake and have yours, too.

And people with upset stomachs should eat their dessert first.

Well, anyhow, eat drink and be merry for tomorrow you die.

Today, tomorrow, or any time, we can serve your needs well with our MONARCH COMBINATION RANGE. Give us a try.
