ITALY'S nattiness, seized for debt, still hasn't found a purchaser. Here's a tip for the last-minute Christmas gift shopper who simply can't think what to get for who.

Los Angeles' municipal Christmas tree is 95 feet high. Naturally, it would be a super-colossal production.

Incidentally, L. A.'s tannebaum is five feet taller than New York's, which, up to now, thought it had a monopoly on skyscrapers.

Two-man wrestling teams are rapidly becoming the vogue.

Pro grid player is offered $40,000 contract—news item. That's a lot of sugar to squeeze out of a leather lemon.

You can't blame Papa if he's suspicious at whom those mechanical department store window Santas are laughing.

A 14-year-old Harvard university student reads Latin for amusement—news item. Wonder how many hearty chuckles he'd get out of, say, Egyptian hieroglyphics?
