Tansy Ragwort Best Killed in Spring Season

April, May and June are especially timely months for control of a poisonous weed, tansy ragwort, which is making rapid headway in its spread from the coastal counties into the Willamette valley and southern Oregon.

Following the blossom period, control steps are more expensive and it is also more difficult to get an effective kill, states Rex Warren, O.S.C. extension farm crops specialist.

Before blossom appearance, Warren recommends that tansy ragwort be sprayed with 2,4-D. He says research by the O.S.C. experiment station has shown that spray applied at the rate of two pounds of active acid per acre will be effective. One application, however, is seldom enough. After an application this spring, Warren suggests spraying the same plot next spring since many seeds will germinate in the meantime.

Following the appearance of blossoms, 2,4-D spray is not recommended. More expensive sodium chlorate or atlatide applied at the rate of one pound per gallon will be required to obtain a kill after the tansy ragwort plant flowers.

Aphis Control
When plants are infested with aphids, complete coverage with insecticide is necessary for satisfactory control. Care must be taken to apply the aphicide to both sides of leaves and stems.
