YOU'RE TELLING ME!

By WILLIAM RITT Central Press Writer

ZADOK DUMKOPF says he's discovered something mighty fine—that you can't be broke as long as you have a few buttons, or a sea shell or two in your possession. Of course, you've got to be in those parts of the world where those things are regarded as money.

In some areas the petty cash drawer is flush when it's full of shark's teeth, bright pebbles and some fish.

Fish money! Imagine going away on a vacation fishing trip and coming back richer than when you started!

The island of Yap, we read, is truly the land heavy with dough. Some of the stone coins there weigh up to 175 pounds. The stone dollars are in the shape of wheels, from which must come that old phrase: "rolling in wealth."

In some remote parts they regard mirrors as money. This enables everybody to have his face on his country's currency.

The American Indians used to use wampum as money—until they got wise and went off the head standard.

Nobody knows who invented money. All this column knows is that who ever did think up the idea certainly didn't invent enough of it.
