Material Interest

White pique afternoon dress.

By VERA WINSTON

FABRIC COMBINATIONS add interest, originality and charm to this season's fashions. For example, here we have an afternoon dress of white pique that would be just a pretty dress for a summer afternoon, were it not for the touch of black velvet that makes it an outstanding selection. The ribbon, which is run through the scooped out neckline and hemline, terminates in bows for an extra accent.

TODAY'S Menu

Keep Monotony Off the Menu

By ALICE DENHOFF

"I KEEP a nice table," runs the burden of a letter to this department. "I serve plenty of good nourishing food, which I spend hours to prepare and serve, there are seconds for all that want them, yet my family doesn't show any enthusiasm for more efforts or for the food."

Well, we haven't visited this particular household, nor do we know the writer. But we bet we can diagnose the reason for her complaint. It is monotony, just the same old sameness of it all! Nothing to look forward to, no change, no dainty or whimsical surprise, just the same old food, with usually certain dishes or whole menus served on the same old day of each week. And a visit to even a very ordinary restaurant looks up as a tremendous treat, rather than facing another meal, no matter how good the quality of the vittles, how careful the cooking.

Similar Complaint
A friend of ours made a similar complaint to us. We urged her to vary the proceedings by tray service, by buffet meals, by little changes and substitutions that would not interfere with the set pattern. And it worked out beautifully.

Instead of the same old table linen, she went in for various sets of place mats, runners and whimsies like those big green rubber leaf doilies. She went in for trays, for peasant pottery, for glass dishes, instead of the prim and proper china that appeared day after day. Immediately the whole tone of the table changed. Dad loved his family, but did like to read the morning paper. So for him was set a little table in the porch and he ate his breakfast, read the paper, smoked his pipe and was all the happier for it. Sunday a tray breakfast was available for all, so that each member of the family could eat at his favorite place in porch, dining room, kitchen, living room or take the tray up to his own room.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed A. Keitzer returned from a three months visit in and around Clinton, Missouri. While there, they visited relatives, including Mrs. Keitzer's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Councilman and a brother of Mr. Keitzer, John Keitzer. They also took care of some business, concerning the two farms they own in Clinton. This is Mr. and Mrs. Keitzer's first return trip in seven years.

There were neat little tricks with fruit. Unhulled strawberries, moistened in pineapple or orange juice and arranged about a mound of powdered sugar, provide a different touch. Stewed fresh fruits with toast or hot breads are good. A summer breakfast of chilled fruit juice, then berries and cream, toasted brioches, maybe some grilled ham, and coffee is superlative eating, and not too expensive.

Hot Breads
With all the quick mixes available, it is easy enough to run up some special hot breads or rolls. Or invest in some baker's buns, slice, toast lightly on one side, butter and sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon, then put in a warm oven to blend. There's an inexpensive but beautiful breakfast treat!

For something mighty good in place of the indifferently prepared ham that appears only too often, freeze this ham slices by letting them stand in hot water for about 10 min. Then panbroil until brown. Add a little hot water or milk, cover tightly and allow to steam over low heat until tender (about 1/4 hour for a 1/2 inch slice, 15 mins. for a thin piece.) But whatever the provender, whatever the meal, serve it lovingly, serve it prettily. Colorful garnishes are easy to do, and what a happy difference they make.

PRESCOTT-WINDERS
Miss Terry Winders, daughter of Mrs. Erma Winders, and Clayton Prescott, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Prescott, all of Cottage Grove, were married in Eugene, Monday, August 1. The bride wore a blue and white two-piece suit.

Attending the couple were Mrs. Harold Burleson and Cecil Clay. After a few days spent at the coast the couple returned to Cottage Grove.
