Too Much Game
Too much game in an agricultural country can be as troublesome to the sportsman's permanent interest as too little game. Too many grazing-browsing game animals, such as deer or elk, can not only cause conflict with other interests but destroy their own food plants and make it impossible to rebuild the herds for years following an eat-out and a starvation reduction of the herd.

Erysipelas in Hogs
If erysipelas has been diagnosed in a herd of hogs, it may be advisable to double treat all young pigs as quickly as possible against this disease.

Now you Know!

The answers to everyday insurance problems*
By G. B. ARNEST

QUESTION: Recently we suffered a fire loss which was paid by our insurance company. Now a friend tells me that my insurance policy expired with the settlement and I must take out a new policy. Is this true?

ANSWER: Not entirely unless the insurance company paid you the full amount of the policy. When an insurance company pays you for a fire loss it deducts the amount paid you from the amount of the policy. Thus, if you had a ten thousand dollar policy and the company paid you five thousand dollars, you would still have five thousand dollars in insurance. However, you should see your insurance agent about having your policy changed to give you adequate protection again.

*If you'll address your own insurance questions to this office we'll try to give you the correct answers and there will be no charge or obligation of any kind.
