Washington. The Rev. Frank E. Gray, retired Baptist minister, read the service Saturday, December 10, at 11:45 in the morning.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a dress of shaded blue taffeta with hat of matching material and black shoulder-length veil. She carried a white prayer book on which rested two gardenias. The white satin streamers were knotted with pink rosebuds.

For "something old" she wore her grandmother's wedding ring; "something new" was her string of pearls; "something borrowed," her prayer book and "something blue" was her wedding dress. And for good luck, she wore a penny in her shoe.

Miss Susie Teeters of Mehama was bridesmaid. Her dress was of pink satin, and her nosegay was of chrysanthemums.

Donald Horn was best man, and Wallace Peterson was usher. Other attendants were Lennie and Harold Luhn. The flower girl carried a basket that had been the bride's grandmother's since she was eight years old.

Both Mrs. Peterson and Mrs. Horn wore black figured dresses and corsages of carnations and rosebuds.

Bouquets of chrysanthemums decorated the church. "My Darling" was sung by Miss Diane Morelock, and wedding marches were played by Mrs. Ray Michael.

The reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, Mrs. John Teeters and Mrs. Mary Sloan served the cake, assisted by aunts of the bride, Mrs. Minnie Henkinson, Mrs. Mary Peterson and Mrs. Robert Coombs, who also had the guest book. The Peterson home was decorated with chrysanthemums.

For a wedding trip to the Oregon coast and Longview, Washington, the bride wore a two-piece suit of dark blue and grey. They are now at home in Cottage Grove.

It was reported $60.00 was collected in the jars placed in various stores before Christmas and at a special collection taken following appreciation day drawing. The Auxiliary extends a hearty thanks to the merchants and store owners for their cooperation in the raising of the money, which was sent to the various veteran hospitals in Oregon to purchase items not furnished by the government.

Pork Is In Good Supply

By ALICE DENHOFF

GOOD news about pork. It seems that the supply is just wonderful, with this happy condition reflected in prices. Lean pork is a rich natural source of vitamin B₁ (thiamine) and this meat, and fresh or smoked ham in the amount of meat equivalent to about what one pork chop yields is sufficient to supply the entire daily requirement of vitamin B₁ for the normal adult.

Here's a dish that the men will enjoy at this time of year. Have pork chops cut double thickness with a pocket cut into each chop. Fill pockets with corn stuffing (with one c. corn pulp, combine 1/2 c. dry bread crumbs, tsp. salt, 2 tsp. minced green pepper, salt and pepper to taste). Brown chops on both sides, then cover, and finish cooking in 350 F. oven about an hour.

Hearty Fare

Ham hocks with cabbage is hearty fare, and light on the pocketbook to boot. Just boil ham hocks in water until tender, and arrange with wedges of cabbage (boiled 7 min.) around a mound of mashed potatoes.

For another dish that hits the spot at this time of year, cut small baked potatoes in lengthwise halves. Scoop out and mash with about 1/2 c. of milk and tsp. butter for each c. of potatoes. Season to taste, pile into potato shells, and lay one or two cooked pork sausage links on each. Reheat in 375 F. oven until browned, about 25 min.

For a really spiffy ham loaf, have one lb. smoked ham ground with 1 1/2 lb. fresh pork. Combine with one c. bread crumbs, one c. milk and 2 slightly beaten eggs. Shape into loaf in dripping pan. Make sauce of one c. brown sugar, 1/2 tsp. dry mustard and 1/4 c. vinegar mixed with 1/2 c. water. Pour sauce over loaf. Bake at 350 F. until loaf is done, about 1 1/2 hours, basting frequently with sauce.

Call Them Macs for Short—II:

One Rule, 'Keep Talking,' Serves Peace in Palestine

HAIFA, Israel—El Auja, the headquarters of the Egyptian-Israel Mixed Armistice Commission (MAC), consists of two 2000-year-old, stone walled wells and two ramshackled stone houses, which once served as a customs post between the Holy Land and Egypt.

A car can be driven for hours in any direction from El Auja without turning up anything but desert and vultures and hyenas. The only people living at that forsaken spot are MAC members—Egyptian and Israeli officers and U. N. observers.

All of the MAC people sleep in a dormitory room on the second floor of one of the houses. On the first floor, they hold their meetings. On the ground floor of the other house, they take their meals together. On the floor above is the dormitory for the armed guards who protect the site against desert brigands and hyenas. Under an Egyptian-Israel agreement, the guards are drawn from the ranks of Egyptian soldiers for two weeks at a time, and from Israeli ranks for the next two weeks.

The main job of the El Auja MAC, as of all four of the Mixed Armistice Commissions in the Holy Land, is to secure to the former enemies "freedom from fear of attack," as the armistice pacts signed by Israel and four of her Arab neighbors put it.

But "freedom from fear of attack" is a big phrase that means many small things: it means establishing provisional demarcation lines to which both parties can agree; it means effective control of these lines against illegal crossings by either Jews or Arabs; it means exchanging prisoners and civilian internees; it means recovery of camels and cows and goats and other things stolen or captured by either Arabs or Jews; it means dealing with an endless crop of complaints made by either side against real or imaginary—trifling or serious—violations of the armistice agreements.

Each case is threshed out in MAC meetings. There is one big rule: "keep talking until a unanimous decision is reached." Most of the time, that rule works perfectly, but in some exceptional cases, when talking simply does not bring unanimity, decisions are made by majority vote. That means that the chairman, always a representative of U. N., votes with one side or the other to bring a decision.

Four wheelbases—all planned for riding comfort—with overhang reduced to make parking and garaging easier. Roominess galore, with rear seats as much as 13 inches wider.

Plenty of outlook as well. And the abiding comfort of coil springs on all four wheels. And the steady going of
