WASTE OF MANPOWER Those who have made a study of our employment problems as to the number of employed, the most productive age and the number of new people seeking a place in the employment field tell of one discouraging trend and this is to write of those who have reached the ages of 40 to 45 and sometimes as young as 35, as productive laborers. We have felt along with a good many others that the average worker, whether he be a white collared worker or a common laborer, does not reach the peak of his efficiency until the ages of 40 to 45. And this rule would hold true except for athletes of where the hardest kind of physical labor is required. The trouble with this sort of a theory is that we are wasting at least forty per cent of our available manpower and such a trend if carried further would make it next to impossible for the average worker to have any sort of security. The time allotted for the average man to work at his trade whatever it might be would prohibit laying aside any sizeable amount for the day he is forced to retire. The task of meeting tax deductions and deductions made from the pay check of today and still keeping your head above water is a difficult one and an earlier retirement would make it impossible.

CENSUS FIGURES DISAPPOINT MANY We have not seen any of the preliminary figures from the census bureau on cities, towns or counties nearby; at least as this is written, but from the preliminary figures we have seen the population count is somewhat lower than previously had been estimated. The metropolitan figures of Portland were under one estimate, notwithstanding the 1948 estimate of the state health department was approximately correct. We doubt now that Oregon will show a gain of 39 per cent as the public had been led to believe in the ten year period from 1940 to 1950. Our guess at this time is that it will be nearer 35 per cent.

All of which does not mean that we may not have gained the estimated 39 per cent, but getting the public to cooperate in being counted is another matter. The 1950 census taking was undoubtedly a better job than the 1940, but the shifting population presents more than one problem. You might be surprised to learn of the tremendous turnover in population which has occurred and which is occurring in our own locality. Perhaps it's a western trend, but nevertheless it is with us for good or bad.

Washington Letter

The sudden passing of two members of the House of Representatives was quite a shock to the membership. Both William Lemke of North Dakota and John Lesinski of Michigan were well known and well liked. I was not well acquainted with Congressman Lesinski but Bill Lemke was a good friend. The last time I saw him was at my daughter's wedding just a few days before he died. Everybody called Mr. Lemke "Bill" and everybody liked him. On the other hand, Bill had many ideas about government that very few of us, at least on our side of the aisle, could agree with. In this work, however, friendships are not based upon attitudes regarding legislation. Here it is quite common for close personal friends to be professional and political enemies. With the death of John Lesinski, who was chairman of the house committee on education and labor, Graham Barden of North Carolina becomes chairman. It is an automatic succession based upon the seniority rule. It is doubtful if any two persons ever more completely disagreed on legislation than did Lesinski and Barden. Since the chairman of the committee has considerable power in the operations of the group, it is certain that the nature of the legislative production of the education and labor committee will be materially changed. For one thing, Lesinski favored the repeal of the Taft-Hartley law. Barden is equally dead set against its repeal.

In the spring of 1948 when our country was still suffering from shortages of several basic commodities, steel among them, the interstate and foreign commerce committee, of which I am a member, held weeks of hearings on the fuel oil shortage problem. We learned that one of the difficulties in oil production was the shortage of steel. We also learned from the department of commerce officials that the department's office of international trade was still issuing export licenses for the export of steel products and only ceased issuing such licenses when our committee began putting the heat on them. We were told that Russia, who had not been a big steel customer before the war, was shipped 600 times as much steel in 1946 and 360 times as much steel in 1947 as she had ordinarily received from us before the war. Those two years were the years of our most desperate shortage of steel. We also learned that one of the men who was recently discharged by Secretary Sawyer was in an important executive position in the department office which handled the export licenses for shipments to Russia. I had forgotten this testimony until the discharges were announced. Then I took a few hours and read it. There was something peculiar, if not wrong, in the O.I.T. about that time. That might have been due to incompetence, or to bad judgement, or it could have been due to unusual friendliness toward Russia. I haven't information enough to state definitely what was wrong. I feel pretty certain however that firing a few department officials will do the country no harm.

- APPLE CHUTNEY 12 tart apples 2 cups cane sugar 2 medium onions 4 lemons, juice and grated rind 2 cups vinegar 1 cup seedless raisins 1 teaspoon ginger 1/2 cup tart jelly 1 teaspoon salt

Pare, core and slice apples. Mince onions and peppers; add to apples with vinegar. Boil 1 hour. Add remaining ingredients; mix well. Boil until thick, stirring constantly. Jars. Seal immediately. Question: What are the essentials of jelly and jam-making? A. They are pectin (the jelling substance in fruit), sugar, and fruit acid. These ingredients properly balanced, turn the fruit or fruit juice into jam or jelly. Jelly-making is not for the woman who cooks "by instinct," for a jam or jelly recipe is really a scientific development. Rose as Cover Japanese or Multiflora rose is being used effectively for wild life cover and fences in many sections of the country.

Treat Before Painting Before painting, new galvanized metal surfaces need to be brushed with a special solution. This can be a fairly strong vinegar solution, a solution made up of eight ounces of copper acetate, of copper chloride or copper sulphate in a gallon of water. There are also solutions manufactured especially for the purpose which are available at paint stores. Business and Personal Stationery The Sentinel

TODAYS Menu Favorite Turkey Recipes

By ALICE DENHOFF IMPROVED breeding and farming methods make turkey a year around favorite, as evidenced by the turkeys sold this Easter, and in all sections of the country, too. So here is a recipe or two that will take care of turkey left-overs in fine fashion any day of year. Turkey Tetrazzini Chicken Tetrazzini is a favorite dish in many a fine restaurant, so why not Turkey Tetrazzini at home? To serve 4, cook 3 oz. elbow macaroni until barely tender in boiling salted water. Drain well. Arrange in bottom of greased one-qt. casserole or 4 individual baking dishes. Drain a 3-oz. can of sliced broiled mushrooms, reserving liquid. Place 2 c. cooked turkey, cut in strips, and the mushrooms over macaroni. Blend together 2 tbsp. each flour and butter. Add about 1 1/2 c. milk to mushroom liquid to make 2 c. Combine with fat-flour mixture; cook over moderate heat, stirring constantly, until sauce thickens and boils. Add 1/2 tsp. salt, 1/4 tsp. pepper, 1/16 tsp. nutmeg, 1/2 tsp. kitchen bouquet and one chicken bouillon cube, stirring until cube dissolves. Pour sauce over turkey. The Final Touch Sprinkle with 1/4 c. grated Parmesan cheese and paprika. Heat in 350 F. oven until thoroughly hot—about 20 min. Baked Sandwich Puff makes excellent use of left-over turkey or chicken. Drain 3-oz. can chopped, broiled mushrooms, reserving liquid. Finely chop the mushrooms and one c. left-over cooked chicken or turkey. Combine with 2 tsp. mayonnaise, 1/2 tsp. salt, 1/4 tsp. pepper. Remove crusts from 8 slices day-old bread. Spread 4 slices with mixture. Top with remaining 4 slices. Cut in quarters. Arrange in shallow baking dish about 8 x 11 inches. Top with 4 oz. American type cheese cut in thin slices. Bake until puffed. Bake at 325 F. 30 or 40 min., or until puffed and brown. Should be served at once. Serves 4. As a fine wind-up to a dinner whose main course is a left-over concoction, serve a special dessert, such as Pineapple Ambrosia. Shred one fresh pineapple or a can crushed pineapple with a fork. Cut 1/2 lb. marshmallows into small pieces, using scissors. Mix the pineapple and marshmallows and let stand in refrigerator until thoroughly chilled. Just before serving whip one c. heavy cream, adding 2 tbsp. sugar. Add 1 1/2 tbsp. lemon juice to pineapple mixture, then fold in whipped cream. Serve at once.

'Fuel for Man or Car' June 6th 12:20 P. M. Joshua Time

This daylight saving 77777 sure gets me. Now if we were powerful enough to save daylight then we might be powerful enough to trade an occasional block of rain clouds during the winter to Southern California for a block of sunshine. You know, last year our attitude was "Time that was good for Paul and Silas was good enough for us". I was proud of the stalwart upstanding and forthright attitude of the City Dads in Lane county in ignoring such childish manipulation of time as a device with which to fool ourselves into rising an hour earlier. One evening a group of people drove into our station from the north, the car bearing a California license. One of the party glanced at our clock then inquired if that was the correct time. I replied "Yes Sir, you are back in the U. S. now where we have the correct time, no daylight savings for us". About that time a hefty lady who was dozing in the back seat suddenly came alert and exclaimed, "Oh, are we back in California?". That is further proof that a great many people believe the U. S. begins and ends with their native state. Well there is really no need for us to worry about the time as we are open from 7:00 A.M. to 11:00 P.M. so if you get hungry come on over to see us. We expect to have some fresh fryers for the week-end trade at lower price than any steak you might buy. Cantwell's '76' Service and Junior Market Hiway 99 North — Phone 224-R — Cottage Grove, Ore.
