Wouldn't it be a wonderful thing if we could keep the warm (?) memory of Saturday so close to our hearts that when or if we have to endure other winters like the previous one, we could drag said memory out and forget the cold and snow. But memories though they linger, they don't stay quite that warm.

June Top Month For Loss of Layers; Culling Is Urged

June is the peak month for death losses among laying hens in their first year of lay.

Average mortality in laying hens, says Noel L. Bennion, O.S.C. extension poultry specialist, reaches a peak during May, June and July. The death loss in first year laying hens, reaching a peak in June, is the result of gradual building up of disorders that reach a climax during this period.

Birds going light and disorders of the reproductive system are two of the main death causes at this season.

Low producing hens, Bennion adds, also start to molt during the months of May, June and July. These hens are best culled as soon as they are recognized, since producers cannot afford to feed molting birds.

Early molters are easily identified. As they go out of production, their combs and wattles shrivel. A combens contract and pigment gradually returns to black and shanks. Feathers also begin to drop out.

Bennion states that cull hens will bring considerable more money if they are marketed as soon as they show signs of going out of production. They lose considerable weight and become covered with pin feathers as the molt proceeds.

Housing Program Available to Farmers

The farm housing program, authorized by recent act of Congress, is now under way in Lane County. Applications for loans to build or repair farm houses and other farm buildings are being received at the Farmers Home Administration county office at Eugene, according to William E. Walsh, F.H.A. County Supervisor.

Loans may run from five to thirty-three years a 4 per cent interest and can be made to farm owners who cannot obtain farm housing loans from their banks or other sources, County Supervisor Walsh said. All applications are reviewed by the local three-member F.H.A. County Committee.

The Housing Act is authorized for a four-year period of loan making. The appropriation for the current year is $27,000,000 for the entire country.

County supervisor Walsh predicted that most loans will go to farmers with farm earnings and other income enough to repay the loan plus interest without further help from the Government. Loans will be for repairs and remodeling as well as for new construction.

Applicants may apply at the F.H.A. office for loans on Monday in Room 9, Postoffice Building, Eugene, from 8:30 a.m. to 12:00 noon and 1:00 p.m. to 5:00 p.m.
