Kahut NW Champ To Return to Ring At Portland June 19

Portland, June 9. (Special)—Joe Kahut, inactive since winning the Pacific northwest heavyweight championship by stopping Bill Peterson in a sensational fight, will return to the ring wars at the Auditorium Monday night, June 19, when he clashes with Grant Butcher of San Francisco.

They will meet in a 12-round fight, the winner of which will be officially recognized as Pacific Coast heavyweight champion by the Portland Boxing Commission. Butcher is the leading claimant to the California title vacated by the retired Pat Valentino.

It took a guarantee of $3000 by Matchmaker Tex Salkeld, to lure Butcher north for the match. He defeated Kahut by a decision in San Francisco last summer and the local lad has been itching for revenge ever since.

HUNTING REGULATION HEARING IN JULY

The annual hearing on hunting regulations will be held by the Oregon State Game Commission at 10 o'clock, July 14, the time prescribed by statute.

The meeting will be at the Portland headquarters of the Commission and all persons interested in regulations pertaining to seasons, bag limits, and methods of taking game animals, game birds and furbearing animals are invited to attend.

The legal duck kill for the United States is estimated at 18.5 million by the Fish and Wildlife Service, the figure being based on an analysis of data gathered from bag checks and post season hunter contacts. The Pacific Flyway had 21 per cent of the hunters and 23 percent of the kill; Central Flyway, 24 per cent of the hunters and 18 per cent of the kill; Mississippi Flyway, 42 per cent of the hunters and 46 per cent of the kill; and the Atlantic Flyway, 12 per cent of the hunters and 12 per cent of the kill.

C. G. Legion Baseball Team Bows to Toledo Nine, 8-4

Floyd Githens Motors local entry in the Junior American Legion baseball dropped the first game of the season Sunday to the Toledo nine, on the latter's diamond, 8 to 4.

Toledo racked up five unearned runs in the first inning when the Cottage Grove defensive play fell apart. From then on it was a good game with the Cottage Grove lads playing a better brand of ball, turning in a pair of neat double plays.

Oregon State Game Commission Gets Land for Wildlife

The Oregon State Game Commission has received title to 1,975 acres on the Camp Adair tract north of Corvallis from the U. S. General Services Administration. The land is to be used for wildlife restoration work.

The land acquired is located on the former army camp building area which is strewn with concrete foundations, streets, and car pool sites. Because of these obstructions, the land was rated low in agricultural value, but deemed excellent for game production.

Equipment and 20,000 pheasant chicks were recently transferred to the Adair tract from the Eugene Game Farm which is to be disposed of. The pheasant chicks will be reared in a semi-wild state by using the open field pheasant rearing system. The system allows the pheasant chicks to run free in the fields during the day. At night, the young pheasant return to a brood hen in a coop.

When seven weeks old, the pheasants will be trapped and released in Western Oregon pheasant coverts. Ray Dickinson, Superintendent of the Eugene Game Farm, heads the Adair pheasant project.

Propagation of game birds is only one of the many planned activities for developmental use of the area, according to John McKean, head of game division activities for the Game Commission. The Adair site will be used as a field laboratory by the Fish and Game Department of Oregon State College. Public recreational values and wildlife production on the area will be stressed.

Game Commission habitat improvement crews have already made extensive plantings of multi-flora rose to provide food and cover for the valley quail, bobwhite, and pheasants which now inhabit the area. Grain crops have also been sown on the tract. The Game Commission will harvest these crops as feed for its State Game Farm facilities and for winter feeding of game birds during critical periods.
