

High Flavor Low Cost Fruit Puree New Cold Dessert

A frozen fruit puree dessert that retains the natural flavor of the fresh fruit, and which shows promise for commercial production because of its ease and economy of manufacture, has been developed in the food technology department of the Oregon State college experiment station.

The dessert was developed in studies made by Glen Lundeen, research fellow in food technology, according to E. H. Wiegand, department head.

A boysenberry puree blended with apple or peach puree was found to make a highly acceptable frozen dessert in packing and taste-test trials. Peaches, cantaloupes and strawberries also were used with good results.

Lundeen found that pureed fruit yields an excellent product that is rich in natural fruit flavor and sweetness. Used in a frozen dessert, the product combines excellent flavor with an appealing appearance, good consistency, texture and melt down characteristics similar to ice cream. The fruit content of the frozen dessert is 60 per cent or more, as compared with 20 per cent by weight of fruit juice found in ice cream, fruit ices and sherbets.

The simplicity and low cost of manufacture are two factors which enhance the commercial possibilities of this dessert. In preliminary studies, the cost of the ingredients—fruit puree, sugar and stabilizer—amounted to eight cents per pint.

The dessert can be mixed in an ice cream freezer and served directly from it, or may be packaged in pint cartons for storage. Experimental packs were stored for four months at 0° F. with little deterioration of color or flavor.

Eugene Prepares For Trail Pageant

EUGENE (Special) — Visitors from all over the state are expected in Eugene late this month, when Lane County presents its seventh Oregon Trail Pageant, in which a cast of thousands pays tribute to the pioneers who opened the West, July 26-29.

The show has been in preparation since early last fall. And since last spring Lane County men have been cultivating their beards, always a prominent feature of the show. Lane County stages every three years. Early in July the women of the area will turn out in pageant costume, wearing clothes like those their grandmothers wore.

This year it will cost Lane County $60,000 to present the never-old story of the pioneers who settled the area 100 years ago. The pioneer story is re-told in each production, but each Pageant is based on a different theme. This year "Seasons on the Trail" will set the tone of the production, depicting a century of progress in the development in the west.

A full calendar of "special events" will keep visitors busy when they are not attending the main show. The identical production will be repeated four times, beginning at 8:30 p.m. each evening.

A bead contest, street dance, barbecue and four-mile long pioneer parade will keep Eugene in a holiday mood. A modern touch will be provided by West Coast Shows, whose giant carnival will be in town through the week of the big show.

The assassination of Abraham Lincoln occurred on Good Friday (April 14, 1865). He died the next morning.
