WE GRIND AXES TOO

We have always felt that newspapers should be classed more or less as a public utility all of which means that each individual, organization or unit with which we have contact should be accorded the same treatment and should have the same service. We wish that our position could be reversed in many cases and that we would be privileged to have contacts where we could depend on everyone doing his part, but unfortunately we have never been able to enjoy this relationship.

What we refer to and what is commonly known as a headache to most newspapers is the zealotness that a lot of people seek publicity from the newspaper to publicize some coming event and then after the event has happened to promptly forget it and forget that the event may be news to the newspaper. The nearest approach to a situation of this sort or we might say a parallel case is where an individual may be keen to see something done until he is appointed on a committee to do it, but once on the committee his enthusiasm rapidly cools. When enough members with this sort of enthusiasm get in an organization, it's the quickest way we know to kill the organization.

We are glad to be of service both to individuals and the communities we serve and we often go out of our way to do a favor; at least we think it's a favor and the least we could expect is a little reciprocation.

In other words if you have an axe to grind, we might help you grind it, if the task is a legitimate one, but at least we expect you to turn the grindstone.

School Survey Recommends Reorganization of Districts

This is the first of a series of six articles on the survey of Oregon's elementary and secondary public schools made by Dr. T. C. Holy, school organization authority of Ohio State University.

Dr. Holy's 400-page report, released September 9, contains 275 recommendations on every aspect of the public school system. It is the result of an interim committee study by the last legislature to be made under the direction of the State Board of Education.

SALEM—Special—Reorganization of Oregon's "inefficient and inadequate" hodge-podge of local school districts is the basic recommendation of the "Holy report" on the state's public school system. The report, recently released by Dr. T. C. Holy of Ohio State University who was employed to head the study, is now in the hands of a legislative interim committee headed by Frank Schiro of La Grande. Its 400 pages and 275 recommendations will be studied by the committee, then turned over to the State Board of Education—with or without additions and qualifications.

Ordered by the legislature as background material, it will undoubtedly feature in whatever school legislation comes up at the next session. While the report and its recommendations cover every phase of the state's elementary and secondary public schools, from buildings to curriculum; from taxation to teachers, its fundamental recommendation is one to do away with the many weak districts which now provide "poor education at too-high cost."

The Holy committee plan would set a three-year deadline in Oregon during which re-districting shall take place. It would see a commissioner of school district reorganization appointed for that time to work with local groups. The goal: that all of Oregon be divided into districts, each of which is large enough and with assessed valuation enough to support its own secondary and elementary schools.

It would do away with (1) suspended districts, (2) union high districts, (3) non-high districts, and (4) rural school districts (the county units set up by law in 1947 for budget supervision). Also recommended is appointment rather than election of the state Superintendent of Public Instruction and election of a state board of nine rather than seven persons. Election of county school superintendents should also be ended, the report states. Those who will attend Walla Walla College, a Seventh-day Adventist school at College Place, Wash., include Arlene Runyan, Gloria Miller, and Kay Wheeler. Kenneth Bush has returned to Linfield College at McMinnville, and Wayne Chezem will be a junior this year in industrial engineering at Oregon State.

High school students who left last week for Laurelwood Academy, Gaston, Ore., include Ardis and Buddy VanBlaricom, Anita Runyan, Kathleen Doleman, Marjorie Ballou, Ernest Hathaway, and Joan White.

Surviving are one daughter, Christine, of Willamina; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Reinbold, and one brother, Sidney, all of Alanson, Mich.; three sisters, Mrs. Elsie Hamel and Mrs. Lena Absher, both of Cottage Grove, and Mrs. Anne Wiley of Danville, Ala.
