Cheerful And Warm

Wool fleece winter coat.
By VERA WINSTON

DEEP winter red wool fleece is used for a good companion of a coat that aims to bring cheer and comfort to the chilly scene. The collar, which is hand stitched as are the cuffs, is made to frame the face or to be draped flat. The sleeves are crushed with winged armholes. The hand-stitched detail continues all the way down the front. Along with the current penchant for surprise coat linings, this one is lined in navy taffeta.

Eye-Bank Sight

SIX-YEAR-OLD Jamie Arnold is photographed as she attends classes in Washington, D. C., on "borrowed" sight. When Jamie was six months old it was confirmed by doctors that the corneas of her eyes were opaque. Last July, a clear cornea was transplanted from the eye-bank to her right eye, giving her partial sight. Next year a New York surgeon will operate on her other eye. (International Soundphoto)

Unemployment List Grows as Seasonal Jobs Close Down

Seasonal conditions increased unemployment in many sections of Oregon in recent weeks, resulting in 31,140 active job seekers as of December 1 against 18,730 a month before, the State Unemployment Compensation Commission announced today. Slightly more than 10,000 were women.

The number of persons without work was much lower than the 55,300 reported a year ago but the rise in unemployment during November was slightly greater than during the same period of 1949. Continued wet weather curtailed late harvests and slowed up construction, logging and food processing, officials said.

Little change in the employment picture was noted last month around Coos Bay, Free-water, Lakeview and McMinnville, but four of the commission's 26 local offices said unemployment more than doubled, while four others had increases of more than 80 per cent.

With apple picking cut short, Hood River sent in the biggest increase with 280 unemployed against 81 a month before. Bend, the only area with more job seekers than a year ago, reported 645 without work as compared with 201 last month and 600 last year.

The Marion-Polk county district has 3,750 persons out of jobs. The Salem office ascribed the month's increase of 2,250 to seasonal layoffs in the harvest fields and canneries, while logging also cut down somewhat. Astoria, Grants Pass and Ontario also reported growing unemployment, and Albany with 623 idle was close to last December's mark of 635.

The Portland tri-county metropolitan area, including Hillsboro local office territory, had 10,900 idle against 6,850 a month ago and 22,900 last year.

Unfilled job openings declined slightly during November—from 1,536 to 1,400—but the number was materially below recent summer months when demand for skilled workers reached a four-year maximum.

500,000 BUICKS
MADE IN 1950
Flint, Mich. — The 500,000th Buick produced in 1950 came off the assembly line last week, fulfilling a goal set a year ago by Ivan L. Wiles, Buick general manager and vice president of General Motors Corporation.

Production of the 500,000th car made Buick the second General Motors Division to join that tight little circle of automobile makers producing more than a half million cars annually.

Total Buick production since David Buick introduced his two-cylinder, 21-horsepower "horseless carriage" in 1903 now is near the 6,000,000 mark. About half of these cars are still in use today.

Civil Air Defense Will Be Extended To Southern Oregon

The growing gravity of the international situation has led to a decision to extend Oregon's air observation system to the southern part of the state as soon as possible, Governor Douglas McKay said today.

Governor McKay made the announcement after talking with State Civil Defense Director Louis E. Starr, Portland. Starr also advised the governor that a revised plan for civil defense at the county and community level would be available December 20. It is a modification of the original state CDA plan, providing for more effective operational structures and techniques.

A third development today was the governor's disclosure that a special section on civil defense is scheduled for December 14 at the Pacific Coast Board of Intergovernmental Relations conference at San Francisco.

Starr will ask the three Pacific coast governors to adopt a mutual aid agreement so the three coast states could help each other.

Governor McKay said "the international situation makes it necessary to extend the air observation system to all parts of Oregon as soon as possible."

The system north of an imaginary line cutting the state in two at Eugene, Bend and Burns, was given highest priority, and scored high in recent tests. Trial notices of hypothetical air raids were within 30 to 90 seconds of the recommended 2-minute notification maximum. Until a key-point warning center can be established south of this line, sub key-point centers will be used, Starr said.
