GI Bill Rights for College Training Expire in July

World War II veterans not presently in training must enroll in school or other educational facilities by July 25, or lose their GI bill benefits forever, the Oregon Department of Veterans' Affairs warned today.

This means that a veteran who wants to enter college next fall for the first time must start a residence course this summer session in order to save his entitlement, the state veterans' office reported. Most summer sessions start in mid-June.

The GI deadline affects veterans discharged prior to July 25, 1947, unless they are in school now and interrupt for normal summer vacations.

The state vocational education department is planning to accomodate last minute registrants in on-farm and vocational school training. Veterans who still want to enroll in on-farm training may do so right up to the July 25 deadline, at the nearest high school teaching vocational agriculture.

The Oregon Technical Institute at Klamath Falls plans to hold a special summer session starting July 9 to give veterans a chance to start vocational, technical and business training before their rights expire. Applications should be directed to the Registrar, Oretech, Oregon.

Private business and technical schools should be contacted for registration dates.

Veterans are also advised to apply immediately to the Veterans Administration regional office, Portland, for certificates of eligibility. They are cautioned that any courses taken this summer must be in the same field of study they intend to pursue next fall, and that they must attend straight through to completion or lose their rights. Normal interruptions, such as for summer vacations, are excepted from this ruling.

CG Graduate Wins OSC Scholarship

OREGON STATE COLLEGE, Corvallis—Kathryn Clark, a 1951 graduate of Cottage Grove union high school, has been awarded a tuition scholarship by the state system of higher education to attend Oregon State college during the school year 1951-52, according to Dallas Norton, chairman of the OSC scholarship committee.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde P. Clark, BB route. During her four years in high school she has been active in numerous school activities, was editor of the paper and handbook, and has been outstanding scholastically.

The scholarship will help cover tuition fees, and this year totaled $70.50 for three terms. The award is made in accordance with a state law authorizing the state system to give a limited number of such scholarships to deserving students, based on scholarship and financial need.

Varied Activities Planned for 4-H Session at OSC

Beekeeping and interior decorating will be among the new classes added to the 36th annual 4-H summer school at Oregon State college June 12 to 22, according to Mrs. Winnifred Gillen and Cal G. Monroe, state 4-H agents.

Boys who wish to work with bees are asked to bring veils. The decorating class will be taught by Clara Dudley of the Alexander Smith Carpet company of Los Angeles.

Melvin Murphy of the Oregon Mental Hygiene association of Portland will teach a class on "Happy Living." Jane Deneen of Simplicity Patterns will give tips on selecting a wardrobe, and Doris Johnson of the Spool Cotton company will tell how to choose patterns that fit.

A class on planning parties will be taught by Miss Dolores Bracken, extension agent-at-large, who has recently returned from Germany where she served as recreation director in an army service club.

New classes will be offered girls in dairy and general livestock 4-H clubs. Other girls' classes include music appreciation, baby sitting, landscaping, cake decorating, and many more.

Each year about 75 boys learn to swim at summer school, Monroe reports. College coaches will also teach football, basketball, and baseball.
