SCHOOL STARTING MEANS SLOWER SPEED

If we are to have a clean traffic record, the time to begin caution is before we are faced with an added hazard, which will be in effect with the starting of school next Tuesday. After three months of motoring on the streets and highways without restrictions such as the establishment of school zones, it may be difficult to remember to slow down at the school zones or to keep from passing a school bus which is unloading, but unless we can remember and use caution, the failure to do so may lead us into trouble.

Considering the added number of vehicles on the streets and highways and the age of some of the autos, we have made substantial progress in the operation of motor vehicles in the past two or three years. This progress has been due to a tightening of restrictions as pertains to the car driver and to the safety campaign which has been carried on during the period.

Don't mar this record. This can only be accomplished through more careful driving. Haste and speed have never paid off.

BACK TO WORK

This week will mark the end of the vacation for the public school children and most adults as well. We will just have to take another notch in our belts and start to work again in earnest. Vacations for most people mean a change in pace, a change in occupation and sometimes prove to be as hard or harder than the regular job we try to hold down.

Judging from what we have seen the last two weeks, there were a lot of people taking one last "fling" at the thing we call vacation before the opening of school. And the matter of vacationing is becoming popular as records of most resorts will show for the past summer.

Mrs. Jack Montieth has returned from Long Beach, Calif., where she accompanied her husband who is in a veterans hospital there. They have rented their home here to Mr. and Mrs. Robert Jenkins of Lorane. Mrs. Montieth with their three sons and her mother, Mrs. Emma Smith are preparing to move to Long Beach shortly after Labor Day. They have an apartment there. There are 350 cases similar to Mr. Montieths in the hospital so they are well equipped to help such cases. He expects to be there a year and a half.

Charley Stockdale has returned from Quincy, Wash., where he accompanied Hugh Heyne when the latter came for another load of household goods. The Heynes moved to Polson, Mont., first where Buddy recently was in the hospital with a possible case of polio, tho at last word it was not determined for sure. Soon the Heyne family will move to Quincy, Wash., where he has employment.
