fashion firsts

The lady of Spring, 1952 is a pretty lady. She is more and more feminine than her counterparts of the past seasons.

Gone is the "new look" of yesterday with the long, straight skirts and peculiar Paris shapes.

Farther gone is the near "flapper" look of the war years reminiscent of post World War I times. Also gone is the short, straight hairdo that was such a rage during the roaring twenties and that had but a short comeback just the past few years.

Yes, the lady of Spring, 1952 is a pretty lady, a lady of good looks but no fads. She wears her hair either in a poodle cut or a little longer, curling gently just below her ears. Her makeup is natural looking; her lipstick the bright touch.

Dresses and suits this coming season make her very, very feminine. They come with nipped in midriffs and big, flouncy skirts, obviously designed to make the most of her girlish charms. Some of the skirts are spread out over a crinoline petticoat, or a swishy taffeta one, that whips softly when she walks. Or perhaps fullness is at the sides or in the back. Another nice look is the skirt pleated all around.

New slubbed shantungs, beautiful flowered silks, crisp organzas, pebbly wools, glazed cottons, dressed-up denim, striped linen are among the fabrics the pretty lady's niceties are made of.

Coat dresses for daytime, halter topped party dresses for evening, the V scoop neck, spencer jackets or capes covering the décolletage.

Many of the dresses are reminders of another era—great grandmother's day—tight fitting bodices and flaring skirts.
