City Seeks Budget Support

The city in an all-out appeal is seeking support of its budget at the special election to be held Friday, June 6. Councilmen deplore the fact that only 258 turned out at the first budget election May 2 and turned it down by 30 votes. Councilmen, in what might be called a last ditch stand, have requested voters to cast their ballots in favor of the budget. (See statement on page 1.)

The budget is large this year, totalling $135,935.92, up about $27,000 over last year's, with the amount over the 6 per cent limitation up about $8,000. But in actual mills it means only about a 6 or 7 mill increase.

The problem of the city has been termed by the mayor as follows: "You have to educate the people to pay more for government."

May we point out that education along this line meets opposition. People charge and pay more for goods or services. They seem to have fallen into the habit of expecting everything they buy to be high. It is now taken for granted except for the chronic complainers. Inflation is with us, and some writers have hinted strongly that people like it, whether they admit it or not.

Yes, inflation means higher costs, even for government. And in a city that is growing, as are all cities in Oregon, it means improvements must be made that perhaps should have been made many years ago. Improvements at a time when the area that can be taxed is very limited, and the growing, rich fringe areas show no desire to annex. With annexation more taxes could be realized and budgets could be balanced better.

Not only is the city faced with a limited area, but it also is shackled by an old limitation in its charter that reads that taxes for the general fund cannot exceed 1 per cent of the assessed valuation. In a nutshell, this means city employees could not get their 8 per cent cost of living wage raise granted employees in most other cities this year. The council blamed the defeat of the first budget partly on the fact that the paper played up the wage issue too much. However, we believe the higher tax issue is the main one.

The council has voted to put the 1 per cent amendment on the November ballot in an effort to solve future general fund problems. The cry has gone out that this lifting of restrictions plus pouring into the general fund surplus from other funds at the end of the fiscal year would throw it out of balance. But may we remind citizens that surplus is merely deducted from taxes to be collected. Also we all know thinking councilmen would not go all out to inflate the general fund beyond actual needs, and that after all citizens still have the right to vote on all budgets.

Along with this in November citizens may vote on a state issue to relax the 6 per cent limitation, which is actually what people vote on in any budget election.

Another item discussed after the defeat of the budget was the bridge item of $18,000. Some thought the bridge should have been on a bond issue, but councilmen and budget committee members thought it would have to be paid for anyway and let it stay where it was.

Recent raised water rates came in for a look-see when the budget failed. Council immediately solved the objections by giving the people back 6,000 gallons for $2.75 instead of only 3,000 gallons at $2.50. It was only wished all problems could have been as simple as this one.

Although it was not actually brought up in a council session, the fire department said another reason for the budget defeat forwarded was the item for one extra paid fireman. However, Chief Shipley has indicated that an extra man is needed badly and that hiring one would enable two men to be on duty instead of one. At present he said sometimes no one is at the station right after a fire call due to lack of manpower. The chief's only problem now is whether he can hire an experienced man at the present salary rate.

The Sentinel in this issue and other issues has tried to summarize and interpret the budget for the benefit of the voters. We hope we have done it accurately and fairly and presented the problems as they actually are. If the people will weigh the problems and turn out to vote, the city will have won a point whichever way the election goes—that is, to encourage people to vote at special elections. (JHG)

Shaggy Dog Story

There may be a generation of young Americans who have never heard—or heard of—a shaggy dog story. If so, we can assure them they haven't missed much. Still and all, it gave us a comfortable familiar feeling to run across a real-life shaggy dog story in the news the other day, the first we have encountered since the long-past fad for those amiable absurdities.

This one had to do with a Cleveland wife's objection to a shaggy dog which, she claimed in court, received more of her husband's affection than she did. It also received a disconcerting proportion of the earnings she contributed to the family budget, it being a big 95-pound dog, hungry as well as shaggy. Thus it literally ate her out of house and home.

This story has serious overtones we would not belittle. But on its more waggish and shaggy side we would simply note that when a dog raises a bone of contention between husband and wife it's better that the dog, rather than the husband or the wife, should be retired to the doghouse. —Christian Science Monitor

Pull the Pins in the Summer Time

We have about reached the stage where the social life of the community will "pull the pins and fold up for a summer vacation." In another two weeks practically all clubs and organizations will disband for the summer. This despite that we will have the best weather of the year for the next three or four months. Newcomers, who have lived in the less desirable climates, where it is often uncomfortably warm, find the idea hard to understand. Especially since in many of the less desirable climates the social life goes on uninterrupted.

The only reason we can think of for this summer vacation idea is that the population uses the summer to store up much needed sunshine. Numbers of youngsters will emerge from the summer season with a complexion as dark as the average Mexican.

Federal spending budgeted for fiscal 1953 is greater than in any previous year except 1944 and 1945—closing years of World War II.

Federal, state and local taxes take $952 from a $3,500 income, and $5,087.50 from a $12,500 income.
