Street Peddler Back

The street peddler, an unwanted sight, was back in Cottage Grove this week. Not that we are isolationist. It is just that we do not like to see unfair competition with our own industry.

The out-of-state peddlers this time were in the photo business, at only $1.00 a shot. They paid a small license fee of $5 a day at the city hall and went up and down Main street selling pictures at $1.00 in advance.

This brought to our mind the efforts of the Chamber of Commerce some time ago to get enacted an anti-peddler ordinance—one that would make outsiders compete fairly with our own industry. The Chamber of Commerce did not really follow through on this, and the council received proposal of the ordinance only in a lukewarm way. Councilmen said that the present ordinance was good enough. But according to many, it is not good enough. If peddlers coming into town had to put up at least a $100 bond and buy a license to operate at say $50 a day or somewhere in line with the product they are selling, it would be competitive. At the present rate only a small fee is required and off the peddler goes with a heyday. Both the city and merchants lose.

The anti-peddling ordinance was requested following street sales of several different products last summer, including apples, a carburetor device, etc. It seems to us that it is up to the Chamber and the city to follow up on the peddlers once again and reconsider an ordinance. (JHG)

Federal Employees Outnumber Teachers

C. W. Posey of Portland, executive secretary of the Oregon Education Association has come up with some interesting statistics in comparing the number of teachers in the state to the federal employees. Posey says there are 1 1/2 times as many federal employees as public school teachers in the state.

In Oregon state, Posey pointed out, there are 11,500 school teachers compared to 17,916 federal employees, according to Civil Service Commission. A further breakdown shows one school teacher for every 132 persons in the state, while there is one federal civilian employee for every 85 of the state's population.

Referring to an appeal made by Earl Bunting, managing director of the National Association of Manufacturers, for business enterprise to provide more adequate financial support for the nation's educational system, both public and private, Posey said:

"At a time when many national organizations have recognized the critical need for expanded educational facilities, the obligations of our federal government are taking nearly 74% of the total collection of taxes. This leaves 26% of the tax collections for state and local needs. This is a reversal of the period prior to 1940. The tremendous burdens and responsibilities of the federal government have made it much more difficult to finance local and state responsibilities."

We Hope You Live Thru the 4th

If you are one of the millions, who will take to the highways over the 4th of July, we hope you come home alive and you will if you and those you meet drive with care and don't hurry too much.

We have not seen the estimate of the 4th of July traffic accidents, but whatever the estimate is, it will be too high. In connection with the holiday accidents, the Association of Casualty Companies states that a comparative study reveals that in the first 52 years of the history of the automobile, the traffic fatalities have outrun the deaths from all wars since 1775 including the two years of the Korean war by approximately 13,000. Since February when the total lives lost in highway accidents equaled military fatalities for the first time, the historic toll of 1,018,500 traffic accidents have surged 13,000 above the nation's war fatality toll of 1,005,600.

In the four months since the auto has outpaced war as a killer, highway deaths have claimed 6,500. This is more than 10 times the increase of 600 in the number of American lives lost in Korean fighting while the truce talks were being held in Panmunjom during the same period.

In Oregon, the picture is brighter, but affords little comfort. In July the number of accidents jumped from 5,052 in 1942 to 5,711 in July of 1951 with the bad year experienced in 1950 when 5,910 accidents were recorded. In the same month of July there were 1,005 injuries reported in 1947 as compared with 1,150 in 1951. The death toll, however had been cut from 37 in 1947 to 33 in 1951.

We note from the same statistics that in 1951 Lane county had 5,606 accidents in 1951, resulting in 1094 injuries and 41 fatalities.

Armstrong County Is Unique

Few people have ever heard of Armstrong County, South Dakota. It's a tiny speck on the map, with a population of 53 people.

However, it is a rather significant speck. For, according to the Congressional Joint Committee on Reduction of Non-essential Federal Expenditures, it is the only county left in this whole huge country which hasn't a Federal civilian employee working within its borders.

At present, there are some 2,500,000 of these Federal civilian employees, and 90 per cent of them are stationed outside the Washington area. Their salaries came to $8,500,000,000 last year. And their number keeps right on growing.

This is one of the reasons why, if you happen to be a married man earning $5,000 a year, which is certainly no fortune in these days, you will have to work 34 days to pay your Federal income taxes alone. And if you have a good $10,000 a year job you work 43 days for the government.

Every Federal department head wants to put more and more people on the payroll—because that's one way to get promotions for himself, and to gain more political prestige and power. You, of course, pay for the waste and the duplication of effort.

About time for a housecleaning, isn't it?

Run of Congressional News Confusing to Average Reader

by Harris Ellsworth
Representative, Fourth District

The ordinary run of news which appears in your newspapers during the closing days of a session of Congress must be most confusing to those who have attempted to follow Congressional activities during the year. Action on any big bill involves numerous steps. What happens to the bill at each step is duly reported. Sometimes, however, the news report on a committee vote on the bill or a preliminary vote by either House or Senate gives an impression of finality. Then in the closing days a number of such bills get back into the news again because of final Congressional action in both Houses on what we call conference reports. That is the real final action. When a conference report is approved by both Houses the bill goes to the President.

Even at the risk of repeating some "primer class" details, I think it might be helpful toward following Congressional activity to recite the steps through which every important bill must pass before it becomes law.

Assume the bill originates in the House. (Except money bills, legislation may originate in either house.) It is referred to a committee. The committee holds public hearings. The bill is then considered by the committee in executive session and eventually "reported" or sent to the House for action. Then the reporting committee requests the Rules Committee to grant a resolution to send the bill to the floor, and appears before the Rules Committee to explain the bill. When a rule is granted, the majority leadership sets a time for floor action on the rule and the bill. The House first must adopt a resolution to "consider the bill—the rule"—and then it goes into action on the bill. The House works the bill over, often adopting several amendments on the floor. When passed, the bill is sent to the Senate where it goes through a process similar to that in the House.

As passed by the Senate, such a bill is often vastly different in text from the House-approved version. It becomes necessary therefore to reconcile the differences between the two Houses, so a "conference committee" is named by the appointment of members from the House and Senate committees which handled the bill.

Such a conference group has broad powers with respect to rewriting the legislation with the result that the final draft as prepared by the conference often becomes an interesting combination of the expressions of both Houses.

The procedure with respect to the final clearance of a conference report by both Houses is somewhat technical and often a bit involved, so suffice to say that during this last week you will be reading quite a little about House or Senate votes on conference reports—especially those on appropriation bills. It is well to remember, though, that there is no finality about any action on a bill until the conference version is approved by both House and Senate. Until that action is complete there is a possibility of changes in the wording of a bill.

The air is beginning to clear so far as my personal plans for the immediate future are concerned. Helen and I will drive directly to our home at Roseburg after attending the Republican Convention in Chicago. I hope we may arrive there about the 15th of July. I shall then go to Portland where I will take part in a "field conference" being conducted by the Bureau of Land Management of the Department of the Interior, together with several members of the House Public Lands Committee (the official name of this committee now is the "Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs"). This conference will be held July 17, 18 and 19. The meetings are technical sessions in charge of the Bureau and will not be public, but I have hopes of being able to arrange an informal conference with some of the members of the committee and officials of the O & C counties for the purpose of discussing pending legislation which affects the O & C lands. Just how this idea will work out I do not know as yet—but I am working on it.

The Gettogether club met Thursday with Mrs. Cliff Lebow and tied out a quilt to be kept in case someone burns out. The top of quilt was donated by Mrs. Eva Young. We want to thank Mrs. Sam Rasmus for the blocks she gave the club for three more quilts. All club members are to bring a piece of white material 15 inches by 15 inches to the next meeting at the home of Mrs. Mable Bassett also needle and thread to finish one quilt block.

Mrs. Frank Creighton of El Paso, Texas, mother of Mrs. Davidson was a guest.

It was decided at club to have our picnic Sunday, July 27 at the 4-H picnic ground across the track from Blue Mt. school, as Mr. and Mrs. Roy England at whose place the picnic was to be held have sold their home. There will be coffee and ice cream and a picnic lunch at noon. If anyone has outdoor games they can bring them.

Hall stonies as big as marbles fell Saturday evening at the Glen Roby home and others in that vicinity. The storm did quite a lot of damage to fruit and gardens. The stonies also fell till the ground was white at the home of Mrs. Berta McGuire, but in between we had just a hard rain and wind with lots of thunder and lightning.

They each had a cake, Judy's in pink with four candles, and Charlotte's in blue with three candles. The brothers, Allen Rearrick and Dan Duley, brought in the cakes and sang "Happy Birthday," for their sisters. After dinner they opened their birthday gifts and tried on their new clothes they had received.

ATTENDS TOWNSEND MEET

On June 12 in company with my wife and granddaughter and Mr. and Mrs. Newton Land we left for a few days outing, stopped briefly with the Frank Browns at Grants Pass, left the Lands with their daughter in Dunsmuir and arrived at the home of our daughter, Mrs. Alice Lewis, in Santa Monica.

On Monday I left for the national Townsend convention in Long Beach. The keynote speaker, a retired minister, spoke on the subject, "Unite to Legislate." Labor leaders also stressed that point, saying in part that as we were travelling the same way we may as well travel together by uniting our voting strength.

The outstanding address of the convention was by Leslie Claypool, radio commentator and political editor of the Los Angeles Times. He said he had watched the growth of the Townsend movement which should have credit for our Social Security law and all advancement in social legislation. He suggested a Federal retirement of around $150 per month for all on the SS plan, only broader and deeper. He attributed the growth and strength of the organization to the honest and efficient way it had been handled.

One very noticeable and to me commendable thing was the fact that while liquor is available in almost every block, I never smelled a single liquor breath in that crowd of several thousand whose ages were from 3 to 98 years.

We had the pleasure of driving on some of the California freeway roads but found none with access roads further apart than about one mile.

Although we had seen the famous California redwoods we came home by that route. The weather, roads, etc. were perfect and we had a wonderful vacation. Elmer J. Kent

LIQUOR STORES TO CLOSE FOR TWO-DAY HOLIDAY

State liquor stores and agencies will be closed Friday and Saturday, July 4 and 5, the Oregon liquor control commission has announced, both days being declared legal holidays by Governor McKay. Oregon law provides that liquor stores be closed on election days, Sundays, and legal holidays. Private clubs which have master locker permits may not sell liquor containing more than 14 per cent by volume on either July 4 or 5, as such sale also is prohibited on legal holidays.

Paul Hansen

Well, as the song says, it's "summertime, and the livin' is easy." At least it's summertime, and the rest of the phrase is fielder's choice... depending on how things are breaking for you. And I hope they're breaking just fine. Anyway, it sure seems to be a big summer for vacations. In the past few weeks we've seen more trailers being tried out, more casting rods being whipped around in back yards, more tents set out to air... and more tents being given the old leave-ho from bedrolls than we've seen in many an optimistic day.

Well, as I've said before, we're mighty lucky to live in a country where we've got more vacation choices than you can shake a well-used road map at. The only limits to our choice are the amount of time we have away from the old grindstone, and the health of our grudge. Apart from that, we can head for the hills, the sea, the desert, the forest, the river or the front porch rook. It's a big selection, with lots of variety... and they all have their points.

A tire-tip that's good to remember about this season is to keep close check on tire pressure. You need about five to six pounds less than in winter driving conditions... And too much pressure is just inviting blow-outs on summer highways.

Let's all support the Cottage Grove Rodeo July 19 and 20. What helps the Rodeo helps Cottage Grove.
