

fashion firsts

The fashion world always creates excitement with the first glimpses into forecasts of styles for the new season ahead. The first fall showings are now going on in New York and California.

What are the trends? According to reports, the full-blown look of fall and spring of the past season are out, with a gentle fullness to a slim line to be more in vogue. And pleats, pleats, pleats galore. With the new miracle fabrics of orlon and dacron blended with rayon and wool, permanently pressed pleats are definitely in.

Not only are the fabrics, made possible through chemistry, wrinkle resistant but can be washed without losing their shape. Many suits, dresses and blouses will be in combinations of new fabrics blended with the old.

The middie line in blouses, dresses and skirts, introduced slightly this spring, will be good. The middie look in blouses is the torso look, best only on the perfect figure. This fact alone might make it faddish. However, in the dress and skirt it means smoothness to the neckline, then flare or pleats, really flattering to many figures.

As for fabrics, they are many and varied. For coats, the nubby wools, with more of a brushed than a poodle look for fall. Some wools look like fur, with the new trend to wear a flannel or orlon-wool blend suit with smooth finish to pair with coat of exactly the same color but with a furry or nubby finish. Many wool coatings have a bulky looking face, but are soft without weight. Tweeds made

CONSCIENCE-SIRENS PLEAD

Fire and Police sirens screech warnings of impending disaster; lives are saved when those sirens are heeded.

We have church bells, on Sunday morning, that peal a clear call to take heed. Their notes are not imperative; they plead to live better lives. We can ignore them and live; but there breathing is not living; that is empty, a void. Living at its best is serving others and the starting point is to serve Him, in His temple. The roots of the finer instincts of mankind are deeply imbedded in our church. There we find the secret of full, happy living. Heed the pleading notes of our church bells.

Sirens screech, "Scuttle to safety!" Our conscience-sirens (church bells) plead, "Come! Serve Him! Joy, peace, happy life shall be yours."

a definite bid also in suitings, as do bouclé fabrics. The synthetics take the field, though, with different names applied by different houses to their miracle fabrics.

Many are the necklines, V shapes, oval, high. Sleeves are to the elbow and puffed, long and slim. Midriffs are high, low, or feature the middie look. Skirts are full with a softness, the more stiff fabrics not so popular, or draped, or slim with pleats.

The sweater is in everything, knitted or nubby fabrics, jerseys, all try to look like a sweater.

Sounds like a wonderful season full of sensible styles and easy-to-take-care-of fabrics.
