Don't Do This!

What not to do when you go on vacation is shown here by Model Dee Kranz: Don't post signs that reveal the house is empty. It's an invitation to burglars. A new "Check-list for Vacationers" warns that many vacationers leave such signs behind, in notices to the milkman, postman or newsboy. Instead, tell the milkman in advance to stop deliveries, ask the post office to hold your mail, and have the newspaper sent to your vacation address.

Other Do's and Don'ts prominent on the check-list include:

- DO lock doors and windows—but DON'T pull down window shades for that also signals an empty house and invites trouble.
- DON'T forget flash light, first aid kit, camera and . . . bottle opener, can opener, cleansing tissue, sun glasses, aspirin, and sun lotion.
- DO carry "Scotch" cellophane tape in the glove compartment for such "little" jobs as wrapping sandwiches, repairing road maps, mending torn pages in children's books, and removing lint and dust from clothing. (Wrap tape around your hand, sticky side out, and pat your clothing to pick up lint and dust.)
- DO turn off water and the gas hot water heater to avoid leaks that may develop—and DO pull plugs out of electric outlets to avoid short-circuits that could cause fire.
- DO seal perfume and lotion bottles and insect-repellent bottles with cellophane tape to prevent spilling inside your luggage, and seal packages and cartons with tape to keep dust out.
- DO make reservations in advance unless planning your trip "gypsy style." Otherwise, start looking for lodging about 4 or 5 p.m.
- DO keep a running picture-story of your vacation with postcards or snapshots. Link them together with tape, to keep them in the right order, easy to show.
