MORE JOBS FROM LUMBER ADVERTISING

Governor Paul Patterson praised the lumber industry for its outstanding job of national advertising and promotion which won the coveted Mac Williams Memorial award given annually by the Oregon Advertising Club for the best national advertising program. Here the governor looks at one of the full-color advertisements which appear regularly in leading national magazines. Looking on is Robert Mahaffay, advertising and promotion manager of the West Coast Lumbermen's Association which conducts the nation-wide promotion campaign. Patterson said this hard-hitting advertising helps make secure jobs of 175,000 northwest timber products workers and stabilizes the region's economy.

Study Discloses State's Highway Needs Critical

Some $390,560,000 would be needed to bring federal-aid highways in Oregon up to adequate standards, according to Arthur O. Dietz, president of C.I.T. Financial Corporation, the nation's biggest independent financing institution.

Dietz quoted a study by the American Association of State Highway Officials in pointing out that some 6,240 miles of Oregon's federal-aid highways are 'considered inadequate.'

Nationally, he explained, improvements are needed on almost 64 per cent, or more than 429,000 miles, of the federal-aid system. On all roads and streets—federal, state and local—he said at least $50 billion is needed just to bring the system up to adequate standards. Road spending in the United States, Dietz declared, must be increased to a level of some $11 billion a year, more than double the present rate, 'if we are to solve the highway crisis.'

Dietz said federal-aid highway needs are particularly critical because the system's 673,000 miles, only about one-fifth of the nation's roadway mileage, carry four-fifths of the traffic.

Emphasizing the seriousness of the nation's traffic problem, Dietz said the average rural road is more than 20 years old and was last surfaced more than 15 years ago.

'Highway travel has climbed to more than two and one-half times the volume in 1931, when many of our roads were constructed,' Dietz said. 'Traffic volume in 1950 reached a level that had not been expected until 1960. Today we have some 55,000,000 vehicles on our roadways. By 1975, we probably will have 85,000,000 vehicles in use and traffic volume probably will be doubled by 1970.'

If the nation is to continue to prosper, Dietz said, highway spending must be increased to a level of some $11 billion a year over at least a 10-year period.
