We Zigged When We Should Have Zagged

Several years ago a prize fighter lost a hard fight. In losing the fight he said he should have zigged instead of zagged. We find ourselves in much the same predicament as the fighter when we acted on some faulty information and stated the Cottage Grove armory had not been repaired or painted in several years. The error might have been partly due to the fact in the times we have been in the armory, some of the rooms appeared to have been rather drab. At any rate we soon heard from the false accusation from not one but several connected with the National Guard gave us a call and one of the boys, who works in our shop said he happened to know that the armory did get a lot of paint about four years ago and that there was a lot of painting done.

If there is any consolation in a rather embarrassing situation in which we find ourselves, it is that a lot more people read the editorials than we thought possible and we wish to extend our apologies to members of the National Guard and to the custodian.

Armory Repairs

Dear Editor:

In the last five years — five years, not fifteen or twenty — the following repairs have been made to the armory: The roof was completely retarred, the balcony, which was condemned during World War II, was repaired and the massive crossbeams were reinforced; the floors were all sanded, varnished and re waxed, including the main floor. Some have been re waxed a number of times; the outside of building has been painted; the inside has been repainted completely once, and some rooms have been painted at least three times in the last five years; the basement floor has been painted, and part of the basement that had exposed beams has since been sealed in; a modern heating system has been installed to take the place of the old wood and coal furnace; and a gas cook stove has replaced the old wood stove. The new caretaker, besides his other work, painted the National Guard rooms at Fort Lewis this year. These are but a few of the things that have been done to the armory in the last five years.

Three years ago officials of the state ranked it as one of the best kept armories in Oregon. To my knowledge it still is.

Your article mentioned the Cottage Grove National Guard was second only to one unit from the standpoint of enlisted strength. The largest unit doesn't even have an armory to meet in. They have to meet at an airport.

I quote, "A public building of this sort should be kept in such a manner that the citizens of this and surrounding communities can be proud of it." Do you realize that past presidents and the present president of the armory board, past caretakers and present caretaker and a number of other men have put in a great deal of unpaid hours and their own free time to keep the armory in good condition? Do you know that some of them had other interests in this community when they put in this free time? Do you know that citizens of this community have, during dances, fairs and other activities where the citizens have been invited, broken windows, door latches, chairs and torn loose toilet basins in this armory?

Yes, it should not become an eyesore. Quote, "We think if this neglect is called to the attention of the state in a forceful manner, it should bring results." If the real neglect is brought to the attention of the Cottage Grove community, it might bring results.

We have been talking about property of the state. I would like to mention some property of the city. The city hall until about a year ago was to my knowledge, the worst kept building in Cottage Grove. As far as I know, it still is. Our postage stamp size park is, I'm sure, the most rundown park in Oregon. Don't you think something should be done about them? They too can become an eyesore.

In closing, I would like to say I thank you.

GIRL SCOUTS THANK SPONSORS

Four Cottage Grove girls were helped with expenses for Girl Scout camping this summer thru the generosity of local community Service Groups. The Girl Scouts wish to express their appreciation to Loyal Order of the Moose No. 810, Cottage Grove and also to the Cottage Grove Rebekah Lodge No. 24. Fire Hazards Remaining Moderate in Local Area

Fire hazards remain moderate at the Bohemia area. Prevailing and moderate westerly winds have held humidity and fuel sticks high. So far there are no recordings at the weather station which would have shut down woods operations had they been working.

Regardless of the fair and favorable weather, fires could get underway with disastrous results. Hence all caution should be used by all berry pickers in the old cut-over areas.

Trail and timber sale layout crews are now working in the far corner of the district. Camps will remain until the work is completed this fall.

Council Awards

green to a blinking yellow during certain hours.

Both suggestions only partially answered the problem as many log trucks have to go through Main to get to the east end of town, and a switching of signals might endanger the lives of pedestrians. The council decided to nullify the problem over a while before deciding on a definite answer.

"Pioneer Memorial" Bridge

The idea of naming the new Main street bridge the "Pioneer Memorial" bridge in honor of CG's builders, brought up at the last council meeting, was warmly received by many of Cottage Grove's pioneers.

The idea includes the building of a park in the strip of land at the new bridge with the erection of several plaques or monuments in honor of Grove's pioneers.

The council gave these interested citizens a hearty encouragement to go ahead and form a committee and plan for the memorial and backed them solidly in the undertaking.

As It Affects
Mr. Advertiser
Mr. and Mrs. Buyer

People tune in on Radio and TV programs because of the entertainment they offer.

There is only one reason why persons will read an advertisement in the Sentinel—an interest in the thing which is advertised. Newspaper advertising attracts prospects—prospects for the things which are advertised.

Definition of a prospect:
A person who is able, and just about ready, to buy. There are new prospects each and every week.

People who are ABLE and JUST ABOUT READY to buy. What do they do? Do they twirl the dials of their radio or TV set to learn what's being featured in dresses, etc. — Do they begin thumbing thru back copies of magazines? No. Do they take long walks scouting the bill boards in quest of the best values? No, they don't do any of these things as a preliminary to their buying trip. But they do turn to their Sentinel with greater interest than ever. They know from years of experience that in their newspaper they will find the complete and authentic story of merchandise—the story of what is new today, what is being featured and what's on sale today, and they have never been known to "TUNE OUT" the Sentinel because of the "commercials" in it.
