STRENGTH FOR THESE DAYS

I will remember the words of the Lord: surely I will remember Thy wonders of old. (Psalms 77, 11.)

Each morning, before the distractions of the day begin, let us look to the sun which unfailingly has risen again, and know and affirm that God is; let us thank Him for the new beginning, and ask for His guidance, His mercy and love.

How To Send Flowers

Who doesn't like to receive or give flowers! In their natural loveliness they more fully express love, sympathy, congratulations or other sentiment than words or gifts. However, there is a right way to send flowers just as there is a proper etiquette in other forms of social decor. Your florist can do much to advise you. Talk to him about the individual or particular occasion, so that he can help you make a perfect choice. There are just a few simple, logical rules to follow, according to the Florists Information Council.

If the flowers are to go to someone in a hospital, order arranged flowers or a plant rather than a box of flowers because busy nurses have little time for arranging them. Don't select too-fragrant flowers or vivid colors for one who is extremely ill. Include an extra flower for the nurse. The traditional American custom of sending flowers to assuage grief and lend beauty to a somber occasion needs but a few gracious touches of consideration and tact. Remember, flowers are sent as a tribute and a true expression of sympathy. In sending flowers to the funeral, address them to the funeral of the individual if known to you; otherwise to the nearest relative you know. If you are especially fond of the bereaved family, it is a nice thought to send some flowers to the home the day after the funeral to let them know your thoughts are with them.

For the young folks, corsages should be delicate in hue, in keeping with youth, while the more mature will appreciate something more sophisticated. A tip for the men: select corsages to match or contrast the color of the gown to be worn. If in doubt, white is always right.

Who pays for what for weddings is frequently questioned. The answers are simple and positive. The bride's family pays for all flowers in the church, the reception and for the bridesmaid's bouquets. Either the groom or the bride's family pays for the bride's bouquet, but the groom pays for the boutonnieres for his best man, the ushers and himself. He also pays for the bride's going-away corsage and for the corsages for both mothers and any sisters who are not bridesmaids.

Flowers are one of God's most beautiful natural gifts, and have an eloquence and dignity of expression. They are an offering of thoughtfulness and right remembrance.

The actual strength of the Marine Corps at the close of the year 1897 was 26 officers and 720 enlisted men. The Act of March 3, 1899, increased the officers in the Corps and brought the authorized strength of the enlisted personnel up to 1,823.

Marines performed a great variety of ordinary duties on board ships during the American Revolution. They were expected to impart a high military character to the crews of the vessels. As is still the custom, the captain's orderly was usually a marine.

Bookcase Banister

One of the cleverest ways to put your banister to work is to turn it into a bookcase. This one forms an interesting and useful divider wall. Built of western red cedar, it matches the lovely autumn-toned walls of the stairwell. It provides added book shelves for a growing library which is handy to the downstairs playroom. Your stairwell need no longer be a hazard when your children are around.

"Juke Box" Plays Happy Mess Line Tune for Tankers

FORT HOOD, Tex.—A "juke box" which dispenses hot trays instead of hot live has provided the answer here to one of the Army's oldest problems—how to keep food from getting cold before it is consumed.

The solution lies in a home-made tray-dispensing cabinet devised by members of the 35th Engineer Group's Headquarters Company.

Capable of serving up to 80 hot platters in 10 minutes, the device ends the annoyance of cold aluminum trays. The closed cabinet also keeps the trays from getting dusty or water-spotted between meals and cuts the amount of handling by the men.

"Juke box" is the brain child of Second Lieutenant Robert F. Hillman of (607 W. Second St.) Fordyce, Ark. It works on the same principles as a record-changer, has lights on it, and gives out with trays through two slots on the side.

When meal time rolls around, getting a tray becomes a simple operation. The men switch a lever, hear a clanking noise, and presto! out comes a tray—clean and dry. Five 60-watt bulbs inside, turned on just before chow call, generate enough heat to bring the trays to the proper temperature.

After washing, the trays are re-stacked and the whole process is repeated at the next meal.
