Reflections . . .

Scores of Friends Were Found

Though we think we're far removed from disaster, and I hope we are, the fact remains there are more people killed in United States from wind, hail and lightning than were killed in Korea. It is comforting to know there are men in this area (we call them Radg Hams) who would function at a moment's notice to bring relief.

Recently, thousands of these amateurs set up their instruments in fields and on hill tops, carried on as if there was a catastrophe and logged the stations who answered. It is amazing the number of men who talked from the far corners of the world, who in time of need, would have relayed our distress to the outside when relief would have come quickly and surely.

Members of the Radio Club have a hobby - short wave. That hobby would be the bridge to friends, succor, and materials to rebuild the city we love.

P.S. You will appreciate the many acts of thoughtfulness we render to you.
