MEMORY Lane

Remember when your parents surprisingly permitted you to "stay up" on New Year's Eve until ten minutes past midnight? There was a hushed expectancy as grandfather's clock slowly ticked away the dying moments of the old year, and, at the stroke of twelve, there was a rousing chorus of "Happy New Years." Remember?

Penny Wise, Pound Foolish.

This proverb, a part of our language for three centuries, points up the danger of buying at a bargain price and discovering later that you have received only what you've paid for and sometimes not even that.

Certainly, it is absolutely true in the insurance field that you get what you pay for. Insurance is a science based upon unfailing statistics. Therefore, insurance which truly protects you is insurance against the hazards which you and your insurance agent believe to be a part of your circumstances and your daily activities.

To be "penny wise, pound foolish" in the matter of insurance is to be inadequately insured. You learn this, however, only AFTER you have a loss.

The facilities of this office are at your disposal for a cost-free analysis of your insurance position. Let us examine your policies and make sure that they are complete and fairly priced. We particularly urge this if you have ever purchased "bargain insurance" on your home or your car.
