

Oregonians Urged to Back National Wildlife Week

"America's leading sport is hunting and fishing," according to well-known sports caster Bill Stern. This is right in line with the thoughts of organized sportsmen and other conservation-minded citizens of Oregon who will join those of other states this week in laying public stress on the need for natural resources conservation.

The occasion will be National Wildlife week, which has been sponsored annually since 1938 by the National Wildlife Federation and its affiliated groups. Charles Stanton, Roseburg, editor of the Roseburg News Review, has been appointed state chairman for National Wildlife week. Stanton, along with the Oregon game commission, urges all public agencies, sportsmen's groups, and civic organizations to take part.

Game director Phil Schneider commenting on Wildlife week stated, "While such popular game animals and fish as the upland game birds, salmon and steelhead trout are in no danger of extinction on a national scale, even these are endangered in many localities because of land and water abuse and unnecessary destruction of their natural food and cover."

Pointing out the importance of continued wildlife crops through wise use and management, Schneider said that "on a national scale, hunting and fishing outdraw all other major sports with more than 33 million persons buying hunting and fishing licenses last year. In Oregon, approximately one-third of the population either hunts or fishes. With statistics like these, it should be apparent to everyone in the state that Wildlife week and the principles advanced are of major importance to Oregonians everywhere."

Tatum and Haynes' Magicians to Play In Eugene Saturday

GOOSE TATUM

First-rate professional exhibition basketball featuring Goose Tatum and Marques Haynes, the game's two most colorful performers, is coming this way.

Playing with their own Harlem Magicians, they'll battle the New York Olympians Saturday evening, March 24, at McArthur Court, University of Oregon, Eugene.

Local records point out that it has been several years since Tatum and Haynes last appeared in this area. Although the money makers for the Harlem Globetrotters, Tatum and Haynes seldom played with the Trotters' western unit which usually toured Oregon and Washington.

However, they have since severed relations with Abe Saperstein and organized this team with one of their chief aims to perform in the many cities where the Trotters' unit didn't play. And, as co-owners of the Magicians, fans can be certain that Tatum and Haynes will appear with the team at each booking.

It's now a business venture for them and they don't want to pull any tricks which will not insure the success of their team. The only tricks they'll pull-off will be on the court and these are what fans will be storming the doors to witness.

Tatum Rated 'Clown Prince' Tatum has been rated throughout the world as "the clown prince of basketball." He has an 84-inch arm span with tremendously long fingers to enable him to do more things with the ball than any combination of players. His clowning ability comes naturally and with this lies his success.

In Haynes, fans will be able to see the man who has been tagged as "the world's greatest dribbler." In addition to this quality, he also excels with a long two-handed set shot.

Big threat for the Olympians is Bill Spivey, the 7-foot former Kentucky All-American.

Captured
A hard headed bunch of journalism students from the University of Oregon captured the Sentinel this week and all but banned the uneducated sports editor. After hours of pleading, they finally permitted him to write his column, with the condition that he put his name on it so the readers would not mistake it for their material.

Jalopy Time

With spring a comin' round the corner, jalopy fans are getting out their baling wire and oil cans and converting junk heaps into race cars. Somebody, probably Frank Williams at the fire hall, got the bright idea of organizing all the enthusiasts into a Jalopy association. The idea caught fire and over 20 members have signed up already.

To give everybody a chance to get in on the ground floor, the Association has scheduled a meeting for all jalopy enthusiasts at Gene's Auto Service, Saturday at 12:30 p.m. Lots of members are needed to make the association successful, including referees, pit men, flag men, technical committee, and drivers (with the money men—sponsors).

Jalopy's Speedway
The rules and types of cars to be used will be discussed at the meeting so that the racing can get started as soon as possible. Races and exhibitions will be held.

at the Jaycee's quarter mile Cottage Grove Speedway.
Everybody is welcome, including teen agers that are interested in jalopies and racing. For further information contact Gene Cutts, Ph. 138R or Frank Williams, Ph. 531.
